King Antiochus to Simon the chief priest and † governor, and to the nation of the Jews, greeting: [3] Forasmuch as certain pestilent fellows have made themselves masters of the kingdom of our fathers, but my purpose is to claim the kingdom, that I may restore it as it was before; and moreover I have raised a multitude of foreign soldiers, and have prepared ships of war; [4] moreover I am minded to land in the country, that I may punish them that have destroyed our country, and them that have made many cities in the kingdom desolate: [5] Now therefore I confirm unto thee all the exactions which the kings that were before me remitted unto thee, and whatsoever gifts besides they remitted unto thee: [6] and I give thee leave to coin money for thy country with thine own stamp, [7] but that Jerusalem and the sanctuary should be free: and all the arms that thou hast prepared, and the strongholds that thou hast built, which thou hast in thy possession, let them remain unto thee: [8] and everything owing to the king, and the things that shall be owing to the king from henceforth and for evermore, let them be remitted unto thee: [9] moreover, when we shall have established our kingdom, we will glorify thee and thy nation and the temple with great glory, so that your glory shall be made manifest in all the earth.

[10] In ‡ the hundred and seventy and fourth year went Antiochus forth into the land of his fathers; and all the forces came together unto him, so that there were few men with Tryphon. [11] And king Antiochus pursued him, and § he came, as he fled, unto Dor, which is by the sea: [12] for he knew that troubles were come upon him all at once, and that his forces had forsaken him. [13] And Antiochus encamped against Dor, and with him a hundred and twenty thousand men of war, and eight thousand horse. [14] And he compassed the city round about, and the ships joined in the attack from the sea; and he vexed the city by land and sea, and suffered no man to go out or in.

[15] And Numenius and his company came from Rome, having letters to the kings and to the countries, wherein were written these things:

[16] Lucius, consul of the Romans, unto king Ptolemy, greeting: [17] The Jews' ambassadors came unto us as our friends and confederates, to renew the old friendship and confederacy, being sent from Simon the high priest, and from the people of the Jews: [18] moreover they brought a shield of gold of a thousand pound. [19] It pleased us therefore to write unto the kings and unto the countries, that they should not seek their hurt, nor fight against them, and their cities, and their country, nor be confederates with such as fight

§ 15:11 Or, he came unto Dor, fleeing by the way which is by the sea against them. [20] Moreover it seemed good to us to receive the shield of them. [21] If therefore any pestilent fellows have fled from their country unto you, deliver them unto Simon the high priest, that he may take vengeance on them according to their law.

[22] And the same things wrote he to Demetrius the king, and to Attalus, and to Arathes, and to Arsaces, [23] and unto all the countries, and to [] Sampsames, and to the Spartans, and unto Delos, and unto Myndos, and unto Sicyon, and unto Caria, and unto Samos, and unto Pamphylia, and unto Lycia, and unto Halicarnassus, and unto Rhodes, and unto Phaselis, and unto Cos, and unto Side, and unto Aradus, and Gortyna, and Cnidus, and Cyprus, and Cyrene. [24] But the copy hereof they wrote to Simon the high priest.

[25] But Antiochus the king encamped against Dor the second day, bringing his forces up to it continually, and making engines of war, and he shut up Tryphon from going in or out. [26] And Simon sent him two thousand chosen men to fight on his side; and silver, and gold, and instruments of war in abundance. [27] And he would not receive them, but set at nought all the covenants which he had made with him aforetime, and was estranged from him. [28] And he sent unto him Athenobius, one of his [††] Friends, to commune with him, saying,

Ye hold possession of Joppa and Gazara, and the citadel that is in Jerusalem, cities of my kingdom. [29] The borders thereof ye have wasted, and done great hurt in the land, and got the dominion of many places in my kingdom. [30] Now therefore deliver up the cities which ye have taken, and the tributes of the places whereof ye have gotten dominion without the borders of Judaea: [31] or else give me for them five hundred talents of silver; and for the harm that ye have done, and the tributes of the cities, other five hundred talents: or else we will come and subdue you.

[32] And Athenobius the king's [‡‡] Friend came to Jerusalem; and he saw the glory of Simon, and the cupboard of gold and silver vessels, and his great attendance, and he was amazed; and he reported to him the king's words. [33] And Simon answered, and said unto him,

We have neither taken other men's land, nor have we possession of that which appertaineth to others, but of the inheritance of our fathers; howbeit, it was had in possession of our enemies wrongfully for a certain time. [34] But we, having opportunity, hold fast the inheritance of our fathers. [35] But as touching Joppa and Gazara, which thou demandest, they did great harm among the people throughout our country, we will give a hundred talents for them.

And he answered him not a word, [36] but returned in a rage to the king, and reported unto him these words, and the glory of Simon, and all that he had seen: and the king was exceeding wroth. [37] But Tryphon embarked on board a ship, and fled to Orthosia.

[38] And the king appointed Cendebaeus chief captain of the sea coast, and gave him forces of foot and horse: [39] and he commanded him to encamp before Judaea, and he commanded him to build up Kidron, and to fortify the gates, and that he should fight against the people: but the king pursued Tryphon. [40] And Cendebaeus came to Jamnia, and began to provoke the people, and to invade Judaea, and to take the people captive, and to slay them. [41] And he built Kidron, and set horsemen there, and forces of foot, to the end that issuing out they might make outroads upon the ways of Judaea, according as the king commanded him.

[1] And John went up from Gazara, and told Simon his father what Cendebaeus was doing. [2] And Simon called his two oldest sons, Judas and John, and said unto them, I and my brethren and my father's house have fought the battles of Israel from our youth, even unto this day; and things have prospered in our hands, that we should deliver Israel oftentimes. [3] But now I am old, and ye moreover, by his mercy, are of a sufficient age: be ye instead of me and my brother, and go forth and fight for our nation; but let the help which is from heaven be with you. [4] And he chose out of the country twenty thousand men of war and horsemen, and they went against Cendebaeus, and slept at Modin. [5] And rising up in the morning, they went into the plain, and, behold, a great host came to meet them, of footmen and horsemen: and there was a brook betwixt them. [6] And he encamped over against them, he and his people: and he saw that the people were afraid to pass over the brook, and he passed over first, and the men saw him, and passed over after him. [7] And he divided the people, and set the horsemen in the midst of the footmen: but the enemies' horsemen were exceeding many. [8] And they sounded with the trumpets; and Cendebaeus and his army were put to the rout, and there fell of them many wounded to death, but they that were left fled to the stronghold: [9] at that time was Judas John's brother wounded: but John pursued after them, till he came unto Kidron, which Cendebaeus had built; [10] and they fled unto the towers that are in the fields of Azotus; and he burned it with fire; and there fell of them about two thousand men. And he returned into Judaea in peace.

[11] And Ptolemy the son of Abubus had been appointed captain for the plain of Jericho, and he had much silver and gold; [12] for he was the high priest's son in law. [13] And his heart was lifted up, and he was minded to make himself master of the country, and he took counsel deceitfully against Simon and his sons, to make away with them. [14] Now Simon was visiting the cities that were in the country, and taking care for the good ordering of them; and he went down to Jericho, himself and Mattathias and Judas his sons, in [*] the hundred and seventy and seventh year, in the eleventh month, the same is the month Sebat: [15] and the son of Abubus received them deceitfully into the little stronghold that is called Dok, which he had built, and made them a great banquet, and hid men there. [16] And when Simon and his sons had drunk freely, Ptolemy and his men rose up, and took their arms, and came in upon Simon into the banqueting place, and slew him, and his two sons, and certain of his servants. [17] And he committed a great iniquity, and recompensed evil for good. [18] And Ptolemy wrote these things, and sent to the king, that he should send him forces to aid him, and should deliver him their country and the cities. [19] And he sent others to Gazara to make away with John: and unto the captains of thousands he sent letters to come unto him, that he might give them silver and gold and gifts. [20] And others he sent to take possession of Jerusalem, and the mount of the temple. [21] And one ran before to Gazara, and told John that his father and brethren were perished, and he hath sent to slay thee also. [22] And when he heard, he was sore amazed; and he laid hands on the men that came to destroy him, and slew them; for he perceived that they were seeking to destroy him.

[23] And the rest of the acts of John, and of his wars, and of his valiant deeds which he did, and of the building of the walls which he built, and of his doings, [24] behold, they are written in the [†] chronicles of his high priesthood, from the time that he was made high priest after his father.

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE MACCABEES.

[1] THE brethren, the Jews that are in Jerusalem and they that are in the country of Judaea, send greeting to the brethren, the Jews that are throughout Egypt, and wish them good peace: [2] and may God do good unto you, and remember his covenant with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, his faithful servants; [3] and give you all a heart to worship him and do his [*] pleasure with a great heart and a willing soul; [4] and open your heart in his law and in his statutes, and make peace, [5] and hearken to your supplications, and be reconciled with you, and not forsake you in an evil time. [6] And now we here are praying for you. [7] In the reign of Demetrius, in the hundred threescore and ninth year, we the Jews have already written unto you in the tribulation and in the extremity that hath come upon us in these years, from the time that Jason and his company revolted from the holy land and the kingdom, [8] and set the [†] gate on fire, and shed innocent blood: and we besought the Lord, and were heard; and we offered sacrifice and meal offering, and we lighted the lamps, and we set forth the [‡] shewbread. [9] And now see that ye keep the days of the feast of tabernacles of the month Chislev. [10] Written in the hundred fourscore and eighth year.

THEY that are in Jerusalem and they that are in Judaea and the senate and Judas, unto Aristobulus, king Ptolemy's teacher, who is also of the stock of the anointed priests, and unto the Jews that are in Egypt, send greeting and health. [11] Having been saved by God out of great perils, as men arrayed against a king, we thank him greatly. [12] For himself cast forth into Persia them that arrayed themselves against us in the holy city. [13] For when the prince was come there, and the army with him that seemed irresistible, they were cut to pieces in the temple of Nanaea by the treachery of Nanaea's priests. [14] For Antiochus, on the pretence that he would marry her, came into the place, he and his [§] Friends that were with him, that they might take a great part of the treasures in name of a dowry. [15] And when the priests of Nanaea's temple had set [] the treasures forth, and he was come there with a small company within the wall of the precincts, they shut to the temple when Antiochus was come in: [16] and opening the secret door of the panelled cieling, they threw stones and [††] struck down the prince, and they hewed [‡‡] him and his company in pieces, and smote off their heads, and cast them to those that were without. [17] Blessed be our God in all things, who gave for a prey them that had committed impiety.

[18] Whereas we are now about to keep the purification of the temple in the month Chislev, on the five and twentieth day, we thought it necessary to certify you thereof, that [§§] ye also may keep a feast of tabernacles, and a memorial of the fire which was given when Nehemiah offered sacrifices, after that he had builded both the temple and the altar. [19] For indeed when our fathers were about to be led into the land of Persia, the godly priests of that time took of the fire of the altar, and hid it privily in the hollow of a well that was without water, wherein they made it sure, so that the place was unknown to all men. [20] Now after many years, when it pleased God, Nehemiah, having received a charge from the king of Persia, sent in quest of the fire the descendants of the priests that hid it. When they declared to us that they had found no fire, but thick water, [21] he commanded them to draw out thereof and bring to him: and when [] the sacrifices had been offered on the altar, Nehemiah commanded the priests to sprinkle with the water both the wood and the things laid thereupon. [22] And when it was done, and some time had passed, and the sun shone out, which before was hid with clouds, there was kindled a great blaze, so that all men marvelled. [23] And the priests made a prayer while the sacrifice was consuming, both the priests and all others, Jonathan leading and the rest answering, as Nehemiah did. [24] And the prayer was after this manner:

O Lord, Lord God, the Creator of all things, who art terrible and strong and righteous and merciful, who alone art King and gracious, [25] who alone suppliest every need, who alone art righteous and almighty and eternal, thou that savest Israel out of all evil, who madest the fathers thy chosen, and didst sanctify them: [26] accept the sacrifice for all thy people Israel, and guard thine own portion, and consecrate it. [27] Gather together our Dispersion, set at liberty them that are in bondage among the heathen, look upon them that are despised and abhorred, and let the heathen know that thou art our God. [28] Torment them that oppress us and in arrogancy shamefully entreat us. [29] Plant thy people in thy holy place, even as Moses said.

[30] And thereupon the priests sang the hymns. [31] And as soon as the sacrifice was consumed, then Nehemiah commanded [†††] to pour on great stones the water that was left. [32] And when this was done, a flame was kindled; [‡‡‡] but when the light from the altar [§§§] shone over against it, all was consumed. [33] And when the matter became known, and it was told the king of the Persians, that, in the place where the priests that were led away had hid the fire, there appeared the water, wherewith also Nehemiah and they that were with him purified the sacrifice, [34] then the king, inclosing the place, made it sacred, after he had proved the matter. [35] And when the king would shew favour to any, he would take from them many presents and give them some of this water. [36] And Nehemiah and they that were with him called this thing Nephthar, which is by interpretation, Cleansing; but most men call it Nephthai.

[1] It is also found in the records, that Jeremiah the prophet commanded them that were carried away to take of the fire, as hath been signified above: [2] and how that the prophet charged them that were carried away, having given them the law, that they should not forget the statutes of the Lord, neither be led astray in their minds, when they saw images of gold and silver, and the adornment thereof. [3] And with other such words exhorted he them, that the law should not depart from their heart. [4] And it was contained in the writing, that the prophet, being warned of God, commanded that the tabernacle and the ark should follow with him, [*] when he went forth into the mountain where Moses went up and beheld the heritage of God. Jeremiah came and found [†] a chamber in the rock, and there he brought in the tabernacle, and the ark, and the altar of incense; and he made fast the door. [6] And some of those that followed with him came there that they might mark the way, and could not find it. [7] But when Jeremiah perceived it, he blamed them, saying, Yea and the place shall be unknown until God [‡] gather the people again together, and mercy come: [8] and then shall the Lord disclose these things, and the glory of the Lord shall be seen, and the [§] cloud.

As also it was shewed with Moses; as also Solomon besought that the place might be consecrated greatly, [9] and it was also declared that he, having wisdom, offered a sacrifice of dedication, and of the finishing of the temple; so we would have it now. [10] As Moses prayed unto the Lord, and fire came down out of heaven and consumed the sacrifice, even so prayed Solomon also, and the fire came down and consumed the burnt offerings; [11] [](and Moses said, Because the sin offering had not been eaten, it was consumed in like manner with the rest;) [12] and Solomon kept the eight days.

[13] And the same things were related [††] both in the public archives and in [‡‡] the records that concern Nehemiah; and how he, founding a library, gathered together the books about the kings and prophets, and the books of David, and letters of kings about sacred gifts. [14] And in like manner Judas also gathered together for us all those writings that had been scattered by reason of the war that befell, and they are still with us. [15] If therefore ye have need thereof, send some to fetch them unto you.

[16] Seeing then that we are about to keep the purification, we write unto you; ye will therefore do well if ye keep the days. [17] Now God, who saved all his people, and restored the heritage to all, and the kingdom, and the priesthood, and the hallowing, [18] even as he promised through the law,– in God have we hope, that he will quickly have mercy upon us, and gather us together out of [§§] all the earth unto the holy place: for he delivered us out of great evils, and purified the place.

[19] Now the things concerning Judas Maccabaeus and his brethren, and the purification of the [] great temple, and the dedication of the altar, [20] and further the wars against Antiochus Epiphanes, and Eupator his son, [21] and the manifestations that came from heaven unto those that vied with one another in manful deeds for the religion of the Jews; so that, being but a few, they [†††] rescued the whole country, and chased the barbarous multitudes, [22] and recovered again the temple renowned all the world over, and freed the city, and restored the laws which were like to be overthrown, seeing the Lord became [‡‡‡] gracious unto them with all forbearance: [23] these things, I say, which have been declared by Jason of Cyrene in five books, we will assay to abridge in one work. [24] For having in view the confused mass of the numbers, and the [§§§] difficulty which awaiteth them that would enter into the narratives of the history, by reason of the abundance of the matter, [25] we were careful that they who choose to read may be attracted, and that they who wish well to our cause may find it easy to recall [*] what we have

[26] And although to us, who have taken upon us the painful labour of the abridgement, the task is not easy, but a matter of sweat and watching [27] (even as it is no light thing unto him that prepareth a banquet, and seeketh the benefit of others); yet for the sake of the gratitude of the many we will gladly endure the painful labour, [28] leaving to the historian the exact handling of every particular, and again † having no strength to ‡ fill in the outlines of our abridgement. [29] For as the masterbuilder of a new house must care for the whole § structure, and again he that undertaketh to  decorate and paint it must seek out the things fit for the adorning thereof; even so I think it is also with us. [30] To occupy the ground, and to †† indulge in long discussions, and to be curious in particulars, becometh the first author of the history: [31] but to strive after brevity of expression, and to avoid a laboured fulness in the treatment, is to be granted to him that would bring a writing into a new form. [32] Here then let us begin the narration, only adding thus much to that which hath been already ‡‡ said; for it is a foolish thing to make a long prologue to the history, and to abridge the history itself.

[1] WHEN the holy city was inhabited with all peace, and the laws were kept very well, because of the godliness of Onias the high priest, and his hatred of wickedness, [2] it came to pass that even the kings themselves did honour the place, and glorify the temple with the noblest presents; [3] insomuch that even Seleucus the king of Asia of his own revenues bare all the costs belonging to the services of the sacrifices. [4] But one Simon of the tribe of Benjamin, having been made guardian of the temple, fell out with the high priest about the * ruling of the market in the city. [5] And when he could not overcome Onias, he gat him to Apollonius the son of † Thrasaeus, who at that time was governor of Coelesyria and Phoenicia: [6] and he brought him word how that the treasury in Jerusalem was full of untold sums of money, so that the multitude of the funds was innumerable, and that they did not pertain to the account of the sacrifices, but that it was possible that these should fall under the king's power. [7] And when Apollonius met the king, he informed him of the money whereof he had been told; and the king appointed Heliodorus, who was his chancellor, and sent him with a commandment to accomplish the removal of the aforesaid money. [8] So forthwith Heliodorus took his journey, under a colour of visiting the cities of Coelesyria and Phoenicia, but in fact to execute the king's purpose. [9] And when he was come to Jerusalem, and had been courteously received by the high priest ‡ of the city, he laid before § them an account of the information which had been given him, and declared wherefore he was come; and he inquired if in truth these things were so. [10] And the high priest explained to him that there were in the treasury deposits of widows and orphans, [11] and moreover some money belonging to Hyrcanus the son of Tobias, a man in very high place,  and that the case was not as that impious Simon falsely alleged; and that in all there were four hundred talents of silver and two hundred of gold; [12] and that it was altogether impossible that wrong should be done unto them that had put trust in the holiness of the place, and in the majesty and inviolable sanctity of the temple, honoured over all the world. [13] But [††] Heliodorus, because of the king's commandments given him, said that in any case this money must be confiscated for the king's treasury.

[14] So having appointed a day, he entered in to direct the inquiry concerning these matters; and there was no small distress throughout the whole city. [15] And the priests, prostrating themselves before the altar in their priestly garments, and looking toward heaven, called upon him that gave the law concerning deposits, that he should preserve these treasures safe for those that had deposited them. [16] And whosoever saw the mien of the high priest was wounded in mind; for his countenance and the change of his colour betrayed the distress of his soul. [17] For a terror and a shuddering of the body had come over the man, whereby the pain that was in his heart was plainly shewn to them that looked upon him. [18] And they that were in the houses rushed flocking out to make a universal supplication, because the place was like to come into contempt. [19] And the women, girt with sackcloth under their breasts, thronged the streets, and the virgins that were kept in ward ran together, some to the [‡‡] gates, others to the walls, and some looked out through the windows. [20] And all, stretching forth their hands toward heaven, made their solemn supplication. [21] Then it would have pitied a man to see the multitude prostrating themselves all mingled together, and the expectation of the high priest in his sore distress.

[22] While therefore they called upon the Almighty Lord to keep the things intrusted to them [§§] safe and sure for those that had intrusted them, [23] Heliodorus went on to execute that which had been decreed. [24] But when he was already present there with his guards over against the treasury, the Soverign of spirits and of all authority caused a great [] apparition, so that all that had presumed to come in with him, stricken with dismay at the power of God, fainted and were sore afraid. [25] For there was seen by them a horse with a terrible rider upon him, and adorned with beautiful trappings, and he rushed fiercely and smote at Heliodorus with his forefeet, and it seemed that he that sat upon the horse had complete armour of gold. [26] Two other also appeared unto him, young men notable in their strength, and beautiful in their glory, and splendid in their apparel, who stood by him on either side, and scourged him unceasingly, inflicting on him many sore stripes. [27] And when he had fallen suddenly unto the ground, and great darkness had come over him, his guards caught him up and put him into a litter, [28] and carried him, him that had just now entered with a great train and all his guard into the aforesaid treasury, himself now brought to utter helplessness, manifestly made to recognise the sovereignty of God. [29] And so, while he, through the working of God, speechless and bereft of all hope and deliverance, lay prostrate, [30] they blessed the Lord, that made marvellous his own place; and the temple, which a little afore was full of terror and alarm, was filled with joy and gladness after the Almighty Lord appeared.

[31] But quickly certain of Heliodorus's familiar friends besought Onias to call upon the Most High, and grant life to him who lay quite at the last gasp. [32] And the high priest, secretly fearing lest the king might come to think that some treachery toward Heliodorus had been perpetrated by the Jews, brought a sacrifice for the deliverance of the man. [33] But as the high priest was making the propitiation, the same young men appeared again to Heliodorus, arrayed in the same garments; and they stood and said, Give Onias the high priest great thanks, for for his sake the Lord hath granted thee life; [34] and do thou, since thou hast been scourged from heaven, publish unto all men the sovereign majesty of God. And when they had spoken these words, they vanished out of sight. [35] So Heliodorus, having offered a sacrifice unto the Lord and vowed [†††] great vows unto him that had saved his life, and having graciously received Onias, returned with his host to the king. [36] And he testified to all men the works of the [‡‡‡] great God which he had beheld with his eyes.

[37] And when the king asked Heliodorus, what manner of man was fit to be sent yet once again to Jerusalem, he said, [38] If thou hast any enemy or conspirator against the state, send him thither, and thou shalt receive him back well scourged, if he even escape with his life; because of a truth there is about the place a power of God. [39] For he that hath his dwelling in heaven himself hath his eyes upon that place, and helpeth it; and them that come to hurt it he smiteth and destroyeth.

[40] And such was the history of Heliodorus and the keeping of the treasury.

[1] But the aforesaid Simon, he who had given information of the money, and had betrayed his country, slandered Onias, saying that it was he who had incited Heliodorus, and made himself the author of these evils. [2] And him that was the benefactor of the city, and the guardian of his fellow countrymen, and a zealot for the laws, he dared to call a conspirator against the state. [3] But when the growing enmity between them waxed so great, that even murders were perpetrated through one of [*] Simon's trusted followers, [4] Onias, seeing the [†] danger of the contention, and that [‡] Apollonius the son of Menestheus, the governor of Coelesyria and Phoenicia, was increasing Simon's malice, [5] betook himself to the king, not to be an accuser of his fellow-citizens, but looking to the good of all the [§] people, both public and private; [6] for he saw that without the king's providence it was impossible for the state to obtain peace any more, and that Simon would not cease from his madness.

[7] But when Seleucus was deceased, and Antiochus, who was called Epiphanes, succeeded to the kingdom, Jason the brother of Onias supplanted his brother in the high priesthood, [8] having promised unto the king at an audience three hundred and threescore talents of silver, and out of another fund eighty talents; [9] and beside this, he undertook to assign a hundred and fifty more, if it might be allowed him [] through the king's authority to set him up a Greek place of exercise and form a body of youths to be trained therein, and to register the inhabitants of Jerusalem as citizens of Antioch. [10] And when the king had given assent, and he had gotten possession of the office, he forthwith brought over them of his own race to the Greek fashion. [11] And setting aside the royal ordinances of special favour to the Jews, granted by the means of John the father of Eupolemus, who went on the ambassage to the Romans for friendship and alliance, and seeking to overthrow the lawful modes of life, he brought in new customs forbidden by the law: [12] for he eagerly established a Greek place of exercise under the citadel itself; and caused the noblest of the young men to wear the Greek cap. [13] And thus there was an extreme of Greek fashions, and an advance of an alien religion, by reason of the exceeding profaneness of Jason, that ungodly man and no high priest; [14] so that the priests had no more any zeal for the services of the altar: but despising the sanctuary, and neglecting the sacrifices, they hastened to †† enjoy that which was unlawfully provided in the palaestra, after the summons ‡‡ of the discus; [15] making of no account the honours of their fathers, and thinking the glories of the Greeks best of all. [16] By reason whereof sore calamity beset them; and the men whose ways of living they earnestly followed, and unto whom they desired to be made like in all things, these they had to be their enemies and to punish them. [17] For it is not a light thing to do impiously against the laws of God: but §§ these things the time following shall declare.

[18] Now when certain games that came every fifth year were kept at Tyre, and the king was present, [19] the vile Jason sent sacred envoys,  as being Antiochians of Jerusalem, bearing three hundred drachmas of silver to the sacrifice of Hercules, which even the bearers thereof thought not right to use for any sacrifice, because it was not fit, but to ††† expend on another charge. [20] And though in the purpose of the sender this money was for the sacrifice of Hercules, yet on account of ‡‡‡ present circumstances it went to the equipment of the galleys.

[21] Now when Apollonius the son of Menestheus was sent into Egypt for the §§§ enthronement of Ptolemy Philometor as king, Antiochus, learning that Ptolemy had shewn himself ill affected toward the state, took thought for the security of his realm; wherefore, going by sea to Joppa, he travelled on to Jerusalem. [22] And being magnificently received by Jason and the city, he was brought in with torches and shoutings. This done, he afterward led his army down into Phoenicia.

[23] Now after a space of three years Jason sent Menelaus, the aforesaid Simon's brother, to bear the money unto the king, and to * make reports concerning some necessary matters. [24] But he being commended to the king, and † having glorified ‡ himself § by the display of his authority, got the high priesthood for himself, outbidding Jason by three hundred talents of silver. [25] And having received the royal mandates he came to Jerusalem, bringing nothing worthy the high priesthood, but having the passion of a cruel tyrant, and the rage of a savage beast. [26] And whereas Jason, who had supplanted his own brother, was supplanted by another and driven as a fugitive into the country of the Ammonites, [27] Menelaus had possession of the office: but of the money that had been promised to the king nothing  was duly paid, and that though Sostratus the governor of the citadel demanded it [28] (for unto him appertained the gathering of the revenues); for which cause they were both called by the king to his presence. [29] And Menelaus left his own brother

[30] Now while such was the state of things, it came to pass that they of Tarsus and Mallus made insurrection, because they were to be given as a present to Antiochis, the king's concubine. [31] The king therefore came to Cilicia in all haste to settle matters, leaving for his [‡‡] deputy Andronicus, a man of high rank. [32] And Menelaus, supposing that he had gotten a favourable opportunity, presented to Andronicus certain vessels of gold belonging to the temple, which he had stolen: other vessels also he had already sold into Tyre and the cities round about. [33] And when Onias had sure knowledge of this, he sharply reproved him, having withdrawn himself into a sanctuary at Daphne, that lieth by Antioch. [34] Wherefore Menelaus, taking Andronicus apart, prayed him [§§] to kill Onias. And coming to Onias, and [] being persuaded to use treachery, and being received as a friend, Andronicus gave him his right hand with oaths of fidelity, and, though he was suspected by him, so persuaded him to come forth of the sanctuary; and forthwith he [†††] despatched him without regard of justice. [35] For the which cause not only Jews, but many also of the other nations, had indignation and displeasure at the unjust murder of the man. [36] And when the king was come back again from the places in Cilicia, the Jews that were [‡‡‡] in the city pleaded before him against Andronicus (the Greeks also joining with them in hatred of the wickedness), urging that Onias had been wrongfully slain. [37] Antiochus therefore was heartily sorry, and was moved to pity, and wept, because of the sober and well ordered life of him that was dead; [38] and being inflamed with passion, forthwith he stripped off Andronicus's purple robe, and [§§§] rent off his under garments, and when he had led him round through the whole city unto that very place where he had committed impiety against Onias, there he put the murderer out of the way, the Lord rendering to him the punishment he had deserved.

[39] Now when many sacrileges had been committed in the city by Lysimachus with the consent of Menelaus, and when the bruit thereof was spread abroad outside, the people gathered themselves together against Lysimachus, after many vessels of gold had been already dispersed. [40] And when the multitudes were rising against him, and were filled with anger, Lysimachus armed about three thousand men, and with unrighteous violence began the conflict, one Hauran, a man far gone in years and no less also in madness, leading the attack. [41] But when they perceived the assault of Lysimachus, some caught up stones, others logs of wood, and some took handfuls of the ashes that lay near, and they flung them all pell-mell upon Lysimachus and them that were with him; [42] by reason of which they wounded many of them, and some they struck to the ground, and all of them they forced to flee, but the author of the sacrilege himself they killed beside the treasury.

[43] But touching these matters there was an accusation laid against Menelaus. [44] And when the king was come to Tyre, the three men that were sent by the senate pleaded the cause before him. [45] But Menelaus, seeing himself now defeated, promised much money to Ptolemy the son of Dorymenes, that he might win over the king. [46] Whereupon Ptolemy taking the king aside into a cloister, as it were to take the air, brought him to be of another mind: [47] and him that was the cause of all the evil, Menelaus, he discharged from the accusations; but these hapless men, who, if they had pleaded even before Scythians, would have been discharged uncondemned, them he sentenced to death. [48] Soon then did they that were spokesmen for the city and the families of Israel and the holy vessels suffer that unrighteous penalty. [49] For which cause even certain Tyrians, moved with hatred of the wickedness, provided magnificently for their burial. [50] But Menelaus through the covetous dealings of them that were in power remained still in his office, [*] cleaving to wickedness, [†] as a great conspirator against his fellow-citizens.

[1] Now about this time Antiochus made his second inroad into Egypt. [2] And it so befell that throughout all the city, for the space of almost forty days, there appeared in the midst of the sky horsemen in swift motion, wearing robes inwrought with gold and carrying spears, equipped in troops for battle; [3] and drawing of swords; and on the other side squadrons of horse in array; and encounters and [*] pursuits of both armies; and shaking of shields, and multitudes of lances, and casting of darts, and flashing of golden trappings, and girding on of all sorts of armour. [4] Wherefore all men besought that the [†] vision might have been given for good.

[5] But when a false rumour had arisen that Antiochus was deceased, Jason took not less than a thousand men, and suddenly [‡] made an assault upon the city; and they that were upon the wall being routed, and the city being now at length well nigh taken, Menelaus took refuge in the citadel. [6] But Jason slaughtered his own citizens without mercy, not considering that good success against kinsmen is the greatest ill success, but supposing himself to be setting up trophies over enemies, and not over fellow-countrymen. [7] The office however he did not get, but, receiving shame as the end of his conspiracy, he passed again a fugitive into the country of the Ammonites. [8] At the last therefore he met with a miserable end: having been [§] shut up at the court of Aretas the prince of the Arabians, fleeing from city to city, pursued of all men, hated as an apostate from the laws, and held in abomination as the butcher of his country and his fellow-citizens, he was cast forth into Egypt; [9] and he that had driven many from their own country into strange lands perished himself in a strange land, having crossed the sea to the Lacedaemonians, as thinking to find shelter there because they were [] near of kin; [10] and he that had cast out a multitude unburied had none to mourn for him, nor had he any funeral at all, or place in the sepulchre of his fathers.

[11] Now when tidings came to the king concerning that which was done, he thought that Judaea was in revolt; whereupon setting out from Egypt in a furious mind, he took the city by force of arms, [12] and commanded his soldiers to cut down without mercy such as came in their way, and to slay such as went up upon the houses; [13] and there was killing of young and old, making away of boys, women, and children, slaying of virgins and infants. [14] And in all the three days of the slaughter there were destroyed fourscore thousand, whereof forty thousand were slain in close combat, and no fewer were sold than slain. [15] But not content with this he presumed to enter into the most holy temple of all the earth, having Menelaus for his guide (him that had proved himself a traitor both to the laws and to his country), [16] even taking the sacred vessels with his polluted hands, and dragging down with his profane hands the offerings that had been dedicated by other kings to the augmentation and glory and honour of the place. [17] And Antiochus was lifted up in mind, not seeing that because of the sins of them that dwelt in the city the Sovereign Lord had been provoked to anger a little while, and therefore his eye was then turned away from the place. [18] But had it not so been that they were already holden by many sins, this man, even as Heliodorus who was sent by Seleucus the king to view the treasury, would, so soon as he pressed forward, have been scourged and turned back from his daring deed. [19] Howbeit the Lord did not choose the nation for the place's sake, but the place for the nation's sake. [20] Wherefore also the place itself, having partaken in the calamities that befell the nation, did afterward share in its benefits; and the place which was forsaken in the wrath of the Almighty was, at the reconciliation of the great Sovereign, restored again with all glory. [21] As for Antiochus, when he had carried away out of the temple a thousand and eight hundred talents, he departed in all haste unto Antioch, weening in his arrogancy to make the land navigable and the sea passable by foot, because his heart was lifted up. [22] And moreover he left governors to afflict the race: at Jerusalem, Philip, by race a Phrygian, and in character more barbarous than him that set him there; [23] and at Gerizim, Andronicus; and besides these, Menelaus, who worse than all the rest exalted himself against his fellow-citizens. And having a malicious mind [††] toward the Jews [‡‡] whom he had made his citizens, [24] he sent that [§§] lord of pollutions Apollonius with an army of two and twenty thousand, commanding him to slay all those that were of full age, and to sell the women and the younger men. [25] And he coming to Jerusalem, and playing the man of peace, waited till the holy day of the sabbath, and finding the Jews at rest from work, he commanded his men to parade in arms. [26] And he put to the sword all them that came forth to the spectacle; and running into the city with the armed men he slew great multitudes. [27] But Judas, who is also called Maccabaeus, with nine others or thereabout, withdrew himself, and with his company kept himself alive in the mountains after the manner of wild beasts; and they continued feeding on [] such poor herbs as grew there, that they might not be partakers of the threatened pollution.

[1] And not long after this the king sent forth [*] an old man of Athens to compel the Jews to depart from the laws of their fathers, and not to live after the laws of God; [2] and also to pollute the sanctuary in Jerusalem, and to call it by the name of [†] Jupiter Olympius, and to call the sanctuary in Gerizim by the name of [‡] Jupiter the Protector of strangers, even as they [§] were that dwelt in the place. [3] But sore and utterly grievous was the visitation of this evil. moreover brought inside things that were not befitting; [5] and [††] the place of sacrifice was filled with those abominable things which had been prohibited by the laws. [6] And a man could neither keep the sabbath, nor observe the feasts of the fathers, nor so much as confess himself to be a Jew. [7] And on the day of the king's birth every month they were led along with bitter constraint to eat of the sacrifices; and when the [‡‡] feast of Bacchus came, they were compelled to go in procession in honour of [§§] Bacchus, wearing wreaths of ivy. [8] And there went out a decree to the neighbouring Greek cities, by the suggestion of Ptolemy, that they should observe the same conduct against the Jews, and should make them eat of the sacrifices; [9] and that they should slay such as did not choose to go over to the Greek rites. So the present misery was for all to see: [10] for two women were brought up for having circumcised their children; and these, when they had led them publicly round about the city, with the babes hung from their breasts, they cast down headlong from the wall. [11] And others, that had run together into the caves near by to keep the seventh day secretly, being betrayed to Philip were all burnt together, because they scrupled to defend themselves, from regard to the honour of that most solemn day.

[12] I beseech therefore those that read this book, that they be not discouraged because of the calamities, but account that these punishments were not for the destruction, but for the chastening of our race. [13] For indeed that those who act impiously be not let alone any long time, but straightway meet with retribution, is a sign of great beneficence. [14] For in the case of the other nations the Sovereign Lord doth with longsuffering forbear, until that he punish them when they have attained unto the full measure of their sins; but not so judged he as touching us, [15] that he may not take vengeance on us afterward, [] when we be come unto the [†††] height of our sins. [16] Wherefore he never withdraweth his mercy from us; but though he chasteneth with calamity, yet doth he not forsake his own people. [17] Howbeit let this that we have spoken suffice to put you in remembrance; but after these few words we must come to the narrative.

[18] Eleazar, one of the principal scribes, a man already well stricken in years, and of a noble countenance, was compelled to open his mouth to eat swine's flesh. [19] But he, welcoming death with renown rather than life with pollution, advanced of his own accord to the instrument of torture, but first spat forth the flesh, [20] coming forward as men ought to come that are resolute to repel such things as not even for the natural love of life is it lawful to taste. [21] But they that had the charge of that forbidden sacrificial feast took the man aside, for the acquaintance which of old times they had with him, and privately besought him to bring flesh of his own providing, such as was befitting for him to use, and to make as if he did eat of the flesh from the sacrifice, as had been commanded by the king; [22] that by so doing he might be delivered from death, and for his ancient friendship with them might be treated kindly. [23] But he, having formed a high resolve, and one that became his years, and the dignity of old age, and the gray hairs [‡‡‡] which he had reached with honour, and his excellent [§§§] education from a child, [*] or rather that became the holy [†] laws of God's ordaining, declared his mind accordingly, bidding them quickly send him unto Hades. [24] For it becometh not our years to dissemble, said he, that through this many of the young should suppose that Eleazar, the man of fourscore years and ten, had gone over unto an alien religion; [25] and so they, by reason of my dissimulation, and for the sake of this brief and momentary life, should be led astray because of me, [‡] and thus I get to myself a pollution and a stain of mine old age. [26] For even if for the present time I shall remove from me the punishment of men, yet shall I not escape the hands of the Almighty, either living or dead. [27] Wherefore, by manfully parting with my life now, I will shew myself worthy of mine old age, [28] and [§] leave behind a noble ensample to the young to die willingly and nobly a glorious death for the reverend and holy laws. And when he had said these words, he went straightway to the instrument of torture. [29] [] And when they changed the good will they bare him a little before into ill will, because [††] these words of his were, as they thought, sheer madness, [30] and when he was at the point to die with the [‡‡] stripes, he groaned aloud and said, To the Lord, that hath the holy knowledge, it is manifest that, whereas I might have been delivered from death, I endure sore pains in my body by being scourged; but in soul I gladly suffer these things for my fear of him. [31] So this man also died after this manner, leaving his death for an ensample of nobleness and a memorial of virtue, not only to the young but also to the great body of his nation.

[1] And it came to pass that seven brethren also with their mother were at the king's command taken and shamefully handled with scourges and cords, to compel them to taste of the abominable swine's flesh. [2] But one of them made himself the spokesman and said, What wouldest thou ask and learn of us? for we are ready to die rather than transgress the laws of our fathers. [3] And the king fell into a rage, and commanded to heat pans and caldrons: [4] and when these forthwith were heated, he commanded to cut out the tongue of him that had been their spokesman, and to scalp him, and to cut off his extremities, the rest of his brethren and his mother looking on. [5] And when he was utterly [*] maimed, the king commanded to bring him to the fire, being yet alive, and to fry him in the pan. And as the vapour of the pan spread far, they and their mother also exhorted one another to die nobly, saying thus: [6] The Lord God beholdeth, and in truth is [†] intreated for us, as Moses declared in [‡] his song, which witnesseth against the people to their faces, saying, And he shall be [§] intreated for his servants.

[7] And when the first had died after this manner, they brought the second to the mocking; and they pulled off the skin of his head with the hair and asked him, Wilt thou eat, before thy body be punished in every limb? [8] But he answered in the language of his fathers and said to them, No. Wherefore he also underwent the next torture in succession, as the first had done. [9] And when he was at the last gasp, he said, Thou, miscreant, dost release us out of this present life, but the King of the world shall raise up us, who have died for his laws, unto an eternal renewal of life.

[10] And after him was the third made a mocking-stock. And when he was required, he quickly put out his tongue, and stretched forth his hands courageously, [11] and nobly said, From heaven I possess these; and for his laws' sake I contemn these; and from him I hope to receive these back again: [12] insomuch that the king himself and they that were with him were astonished at the young man's soul, for that he nothing regarded the pains.

[13] And when he too was dead, they shamefully handled and tortured the fourth in like manner. [14] And being come near unto death he said thus: It is good to die at the hands of men and look for the hopes which are given by God, that we shall be raised up again by him; for as for thee, thou shalt have no resurrection unto life.

[15] And next after him they brought the fifth, and shamefully handled him. [16] But he looked toward [] the king and said, Because thou hast authority among men, though thou art thyself corruptible, thou doest what thou wilt; yet think not that our race hath been forsaken of God; [17] but hold thou on thy way, and behold his sovereign majesty, how it will torture thee and thy seed.

[18] And after him they brought the sixth. And when he was at the point to die he said, Be not vainly deceived, for we suffer these things for our own doings, as sinning against our own God: marvellous things are come to pass; [19] but think not thou that thou shalt be unpunished, having assayed to fight against God.

[20] But above all was the mother marvellous and worthy of honourable memory; for when she looked on seven sons perishing within the space of one day, she bare the sight with a good courage for the hopes that she had set on the Lord. [21] And she exhorted each one of them in the language of their fathers, filled with a noble temper and stirring up her womanish thought with manly passion, saying unto them, [22] I know not how ye came into my womb, neither was it I that bestowed on you your [††] spirit and your life, and it was not I that brought into order the first elements of each one of you. [23] Therefore the Creator of the world, who fashioned the [‡‡] generation of man and devised the [§§] generation of all things, in mercy giveth back to you again both your [] spirit and your life, as ye now contemn your own selves for his laws' sake. [24] But Antiochus, thinking himself to be despised, and suspecting the reproachful voice, whilst the youngest was yet alive did not only make his appeal to him by words, but also at the same time promised with oaths that he would enrich him and [†††] raise him to high estate, if he would turn from the customs of his fathers, and that he would take him for his [‡‡‡] Friend and intrust him with affairs. [25] But when the young man would in no wise give heed, the king called unto him his mother, and exhorted her that she would counsel the lad to save himself. [26] And when he had exhorted her with many words, she undertook to persuade her son. [27] But bending toward him, laughing the cruel tyrant to scorn, she spoke thus in the language of her fathers: My son, have pity upon me that carried thee nine months in my womb, and gave thee suck three years, and nourished and brought thee up unto this age, and sustained thee. [28] I beseech thee, my child, to lift thine eyes unto the heaven and the earth, and to see all things that are therein, and thus to recognise that God made them not of things that were, and that the race of men in this wise cometh into being. [30] But before she had yet ended speaking, the young man said, Whom wait ye for? I obey not the commandment of the king, but I hearken to the commandment of the law that was given to our fathers through Moses. [31] But thou, that hast devised all manner of evil against the Hebrews, shalt in no wise escape the hands of God. [32] For we are suffering because of our own sins; [33] and if for rebuke and chastening our living Lord hath been angered a little while, yet shall he again be reconciled with his own servants. [34] But thou, O unholy man and of all most vile, be not vainly lifted up in thy wild pride with uncertain hopes, raising thy hand against the heavenly children; [35] For not yet hast thou escaped the judgement of the Almighty God that seeth all things. [36] For these our brethren, having endured a §§§ short pain that bringeth everlasting life, have now * died under God's covenant; But thou, through the judgement of God, shalt receive in just measure the penalties of thine arrogancy. [37] But I, as my brethren, give up both body and soul for the laws of our fathers, calling upon God that he may speedily become † gracious to the nation; and that thou amidst trials and plagues mayest confess that he alone is God; [38] and that in me and my brethren ‡ thou mayest stay the wrath of the Almighty, which hath been justly brought upon our whole race. [39] But the king, falling into a rage, handled him worse than all the rest, being exasperated at his mocking. [40] So he also died pure from pollution, putting his whole trust in the Lord.

[41] And last of all after her sons the mother died.

[42] Let it then suffice to have said thus much concerning the enforcement of sacrificial feasts and the king's exceeding barbarities.

[1] But Judas, who is also called Maccabaeus, and they that were with him, making their way privily into the villages, called unto them their kinsfolk; and taking unto them such as had continued in the Jews' religion, gathered together as many as six thousand. [2] And they called upon the Lord, beseeching him to look upon the people that was oppressed by all; and to have compassion on the sanctuary also that had been profaned by the ungodly men; [3] and to have pity on the city also that was suffering ruin and ready to be made even with the ground; and to hearken to the blood that cried unto him; [4] and to remember also the lawless * slaughter of the innocent infants, and † the blasphemies that had been committed against his name; and to shew his hatred of wickedness. [5] And when Maccabaeus had trained his men for service, the heathen at once found him irresistible, for that the wrath of the Lord was turned into pity. [6] ‡ And coming unawares he set fire to cities and villages. And in winning back the most important positions, putting to flight no small number of the enemies, [7] he specially took advantage of the nights for such assaults. And his courage was loudly talked of everywhere.

[8] But when Philip saw the man gaining ground by little and little, and increasing more and more in his prosperity, he wrote unto Ptolemy, the governor of Coelesyria and Phoenicia, that he should support the king's cause. [9] And Ptolemy quickly appointed Nicanor the son of Patroclus, one of the king's [§] Chief Friends, and sent him, in command of no fewer than twenty thousand of all nations, to destroy the whole race of Judaea; and with him he joined Gorgias also, a captain and one that had experience in matters of war. [10] And Nicanor [] undertook by the sale of the captive Jews to make up for the king the tribute of two thousand talents which he was to pay to the Romans. [11] And immediately he sent unto the cities upon the sea coast, inviting them to buy Jewish [††] slaves, promising to allow fourscore and ten [‡‡] slaves for a talent, not expecting the judgement that was to follow upon him from the Almighty.

[12] But tidings came to Judas concerning the inroad of Nicanor; and when he communicated to them that were with him the presence of the army, [13] they that were cowardly and distrustful of the judgement of God [§§] ran away and left the country. [14] And others sold all that was left over to them, and withal besought the Lord to deliver them that had been sold as slaves by the impious Nicanor or ever he met them; [15] and this, if not for their own sakes, yet for the covenants made with their fathers, and because he had called them by his reverend and glorious name. [16] And Maccabaeus gathered his men together, six thousand in number, and exhorted them not to be stricken with dismay at the enemy, nor to fear the great multitude of the heathen who came wrongfully against them; but to contend nobly, [17] setting before their eyes the outrage that had been lawlessly perpetrated upon the holy place, and the shameful handling of the city that had been turned to mockery, and further the overthrow of the mode of life received from their ancestors. [18] For they, said he, trust to arms, and withal to deeds of daring; but we trust on the almighty God, since he is able at a beck to cast down them that are coming against us, and even the whole world. [19] And moreover he recounted unto them the help given from time to time in the days of their ancestors, both the help given in the days of Sennacherib, how that a hundred fourscore and five thousand perished, [20] and the help given in the land of Babylon, even the battle that was fought against the [] Gauls, how that they came to the engagement eight thousand in all, with four thousand Macedonians, and how that, the Macedonians being hard pressed, the [†††] six thousand destroyed the hundred and twenty thousand, because of the succour which they had from heaven, and took great booty. [21] And when he had with these words made them of good courage, and ready to die for the laws and their country, he divided his army into four parts; [22] [‡‡‡] appointing his brethren to be with himself leaders of the several bands, to wit, Simon and Joseph and Jonathan, giving each the command of fifteen hundred men, [23] and moreover Eleazer also: then, having read aloud the sacred book, and having given as watchword, THE HELP OF GOD, leading the first band himself, he joined battle with Nicanor. [24] And, since the Almighty fought on their side, they slew of the enemy above nine thousand, and wounded and [§§§] disabled the more part of Nicanor's army, and compelled all to flee: [25] and they took the money of those that had come there to buy them. And after they had pursued them for some [*] distance, they returned, being constrained by the time of the day; [26] for it was the day before the sabbath, and for this cause

Wherefore, the judgement from heaven even now accompanying him, he gave order to his charioteer to drive without ceasing and despatch the journey; for thus he arrogantly spake: I will make Jerusalem a common graveyard of Jews, when I come there. [5] But the All-seeing Lord, the God of Israel, smote him with a  fatal and invisible stroke; and as soon as he had ceased speaking this word, an incurable pain of the bowels seized him, and bitter torments of the inner parts; [6] and that most justly, for he had tormented other men's bowels with many and strange sufferings. [7] But he in no wise ceased from his rude insolence; nay, still more was he filled with arrogancy, breathing fire in his passion against the Jews, and commanding to haste the journey. But it came to pass moreover that he fell from his chariot as it rushed along, and having a grievous fall was racked in all the members of his body. [8] And he that but now supposed himself to have the waves of the sea at his bidding, so vainglorious was he beyond the condition of a man, and that thought to weigh the heights of the mountains in a balance, was now brought to the ground and carried in a litter, †† shewing unto all that the power was manifestly God's; [9] so that out of the body of the impious man worms swarmed, and while he was still living in anguish and pains, his flesh fell off, and by reason of the stench all the army turned with loathing from his corruption. [10] And the man that a little afore supposed himself to touch the stars of heaven, no one could endure to carry for his intolerable stench. [11] Hereupon therefore he began in great part to cease from his arrogancy, being broken in spirit, and to come to knowledge under the scourge of God, his pains increasing every moment. [12] And when he himself could not abide his own smell, he said these words: It is right to be subject unto God, and that one who is mortal should not ‡‡ be minded arrogantly. [13] And the vile man vowed unto the sovereign Lord, who now no more would have pity upon him, saying on this wise: [14] that the holy city, to the which he was going in haste, to lay it even with the ground and to §§ make it a common graveyard, he would declare free; [15] and as touching the Jews, whom he had decided not even to count worthy of burial, but to cast them out to the beasts with their infants, for the birds to devour, he would make them all equal to citizens of Athens; [16] and the holy sanctuary, which before he had spoiled, he would adorn with goodliest offerings, and would restore all the sacred vessels many times multiplied, and out of his own revenues would defray the charges that were required for the sacrifices; [17] and, beside all this, that he would become a Jew, and would visit every inhabited place, publishing abroad the might of God. [18] But when his sufferings did in no wise cease, for the judgement of God had come upon him in righteousness, having given up all hope of himself, he wrote unto the Jews the letter written below, having the nature of a supplication, to this effect:

[19] To the worthy Jews, his fellow-citizens, Antiochus, king and general, wisheth much joy and health and prosperity. [20]  May ye and your children fare well; and your affairs shall be to your mind. all, [22] not despairing of myself, but having great hope to escape from the sickness. [23] But considering that my father also, at what time he led an army into the upper country, appointed his successor, [24] to the end that, if anything fell out contrary to expectation, or if any unwelcome tidings were brought, they that remained in the country, knowing to whom the state had been left, might not be troubled; [25] and, beside all this, observing how that the princes that are borderers and neighbours unto my kingdom watch opportunities, and look for the future event, I have appointed my son Antiochus to be king, whom I often committed and commended to most of you, when I was hastening unto the upper provinces; and I have written to him what is written below. [26] I exhort you therefore and beseech you, having in your remembrance the benefits done to you in common and severally, to preserve each of you your present good will toward me and my son. [27] For I am persuaded that he in gentleness and kindness will follow my purpose and treat you with indulgence.

[28] So the murderer and blasphemer, having endured the sorest sufferings, even as he had dealt with other men, ended his life among the mountains by a most piteous fate in a strange land. [1] And Maccabaeus and they that were with him, the Lord leading them on, recovered the temple and the city; [2] and they pulled down the altars that had been built in the marketplace by the aliens, and also the walls of sacred inclosures. [3] And having cleansed the sanctuary they made another altar of sacrifice; and [*] striking stones and taking fire out of them, they offered sacrifices, after they had ceased for two years, and burned incense, and lighted lamps, and set forth the shewbread. [4] And when they had done these things, they fell prostrate and besought the Lord that they might fall no more into such evils; but that, if ever they should sin, they might be chastened by him with forbearance, and not be delivered unto blaspheming and barbarous heathen. [5] Now on the same day that the sanctuary was profaned by aliens, upon that very day did it come to pass that the cleansing of the sanctuary was made, even on the five and twentieth day of the same month, which is Chislev. [6] And they kept eight days with gladness in the manner of the feast of tabernacles, remembering how that [†] not long afore, during the feast of tabernacles, they were wandering in the mountains and in the caves after the manner of wild beasts. [7] Wherefore bearing wands wreathed with leaves, and fair boughs, and palms also, they offered up hymns of thanksgiving to him that had prosperously brought to pass the cleansing of his own place. [8] They ordained also with a common statute and decree, for all the nation of the Jews, that they should keep these days every year. [9] And [‡] such was the end of Antiochus, who was called Epiphanes. [14] But Gorgias, when he was made governor of the district, maintained a force of mercenaries, and at every turn kept up war with the Jews. [15] And together with him the Idumaeans also, being masters of important strongholds, harassed the Jews; and receiving unto them those that had taken refuge there from Jerusalem, they assayed to keep up war. [16] But Maccabaeus and his men, having made solemn supplication and besought God to fight on their side, rushed upon the strongholds of the Idumaeans; [17] and assaulting them vigorously they made themselves masters of the positions, and kept off all that fought upon the wall, and slew those that fell in their way, and killed no fewer than twenty thousand. [18] And because no less than nine thousand were fled into two towers exceeding strong and having all things needed for a seige, [19] Maccabaeus, having left Simon and Joseph, and Zacchaeus besides and them that were with him, a force sufficient to besiege them, departed himself unto places where he was most needed. [20] But Simon and they that were with him, yielding to covetousness, were bribed by certain of those that were in the towers, and receiving seventy thousand drachmas let some of them slip away. [21] But when word was brought to Maccabaeus of what was done, he gathered the leaders of the people together, and accused those men of having sold their brethren for money, by setting their enemies free to fight against them. [22] So he slew these men for having turned traitors, and forthwith took possession of the two towers. [23] And prospering with his arms in all things he took in hand, he destroyed in the two strongholds more than twenty thousand.

[24] Now Timotheus, who had been before defeated by the Jews, having gathered together foreign forces in great multitudes, and having collected the [] horsemen which belonged to Asia, not a few, came as though he would take Judaea by force of arms. [25] But as he drew near, Maccabaeus and his men sprinkled earth upon their heads and girded their loins with sackcloth, in supplication to God, [26] and falling down upon the step in front of the altar, besought him to become [†††] gracious to them, and [‡‡‡] be an enemy to their enemies and an adversary to their adversaries, as the law declareth. [27] And rising from their prayer they took up their arms, and advanced some distance from the city; and when they had come near to their enemies they [§§§] halted. [28] And when the dawn was now spreading, the two armies joined battle; the one part having this, beside their virtue, for a pledge of success and victory, that they had fled unto the Lord for refuge, the others making their passion their leader in the strife. [31] And there were slain twenty thousand and five hundred, beside six hundred horsemen.

[32] But Timotheus himself fled into a stronghold called Gazara, a fortress of exceeding strength, [†] Chaereas being in command there. [33] But Maccabaeus and his men were glad and laid siege to the fortress four and twenty days. [34] And they that were within, trusting to the strength of the place, blasphemed exceedingly, and hurled forth impious words. [35] But at dawn of the five and twentieth day certain young men of the company of Maccabaeus, inflamed with passion because of the blasphemies, assaulted the wall with masculine force and with [‡] furious passion, and cut down whosoever came in their way. [36] And others climbing up in like manner, while the besieged were distracted with them that had made their way within, set fire to the towers, and kindling fires burned the blasphemers alive; while others broke open the gates, and, having given entrance to the rest of the band, occupied the city. [37] And they slew Timotheus, who was hidden in a cistern, and his brother Chaereas, and Apollophanes. [38] And when they had accomplished these things, they blessed the Lord with hymns and thanksgivings, him who doeth great benefits unto Israel, and giveth them the victory.

[1] Now after a very little time Lysias, the king's guardian and kinsman and chancellor, being sore displeased for the things that had come to pass, [2] collected about fourscore thousand footmen and all his horsemen and came against the Jews, thinking to make the city a place for Greeks to dwell in, [3] and to levy tribute on the temple, as [*] on the other sacred places of the nations, and to put up the high priesthood to sale every year; [4] holding in no account the might of God, but puffed up with his ten thousands of footmen, and his thousands of horsemen, and his fourscore elephants. [5] And coming into Judaea and drawing near to Bethsuron, which was a strong place and distant from Jerusalem about [†] five leagues, he pressed it hard. [6] But when Maccabaeus and his men learned that he was besieging the strongholds, they and all the people with lamentations and tears made supplication unto the Lord to send a good angel to save Israel. [7] And Maccabaeus himself took up arms first, and exhorted the others to jeopard themselves together with him and succour their brethren; and they sallied forth with him right willingly. [8] And as they were there, close to Jerusalem, there appeared at their head one on horseback in white apparel, brandishing [‡] weapons of gold. [9] And they all together praised the merciful God, and were yet more strengthened in heart: being ready to [§] assail not men only but the wildest beasts, and walls of iron, [10] they advanced in array, having him that is in heaven to fight on their side, for the Lord had mercy on them. [1] So when these covenants had been made, Lysias departed unto the king, and the Jews went about their husbandry. [2] But certain of the governors of districts, Timotheus and Apollonius the son of Gennaeus, and Hieronymus also and Demophon, and beside them Nicanor the governor of Cyprus, would not suffer them to enjoy tranquillity and live in peace. [3] And men of Joppa perpetrated this great impiety: they invited the Jews that dwelt among them to go with their wives and children into the boats which they had provided, as though they had no ill will towards them; [4] and when * the Jews, † relying on the common decree of the city, accepted the invitation, as men desiring to live in peace and suspecting nothing, they took them out to sea and drowned them, in number not less than two hundred. [5] But when Judas heard of the cruelty done unto his fellow-countrymen, giving command to the men that were with him [6] and calling upon God the righteous Judge, he came against the murderers of his brethren, and set the haven on fire by night, and burned the boats, and put to the sword those that had fled thither. [7] But when the town was closed against him, he withdrew, intending to come again to root out the whole community of the men of Joppa. [8] But learning that the men of Jamnia were minded to do in like manner unto the Jews that sojourned among them, [9] he fell upon the Jamnites also by night, and set fire to the haven together with the fleet, so that the glare of the light was seen at Jerusalem, two hundred and forty furlongs distant.

[10] Now when they had drawn off nine furlongs from thence, as they marched against Timotheus, a host of Arabians attacked him, no fewer than five thousand footmen and five hundred horsemen. [11] And when a sore battle had been fought, and Judas and his company by the help of God had good success, the nomads being overcome besought Judas to grant them friendship, promising to give him cattle, and to help ‡ his people in all other ways. [12] So Judas, thinking that they would indeed be profitable in many things, agreed to live in peace with them; and receiving pledges of friendship they departed to their tents. [13] And he also fell upon a certain city § Gephyrun, strong and fenced about with walls, and inhabited by a mixed multitude of divers nations; and it was named Caspin. [14] But they that were within, trusting to the strength of the walls and to their store of provisions, behaved themselves rudely toward Judas and them that were with him, railing, and furthermore blaspheming and speaking impious words. of Joshua, rushed wildly against the wall; [16] and having taken the city by the will of God, they made unspeakable slaughter, insomuch that the adjoining lake, which was two furlongs broad, appeared to be filled with the deluge of blood.

[17] And when they had drawn off seven hundred and fifty furlongs from thence, they made their way to Charax, unto the Jews that are called  Tubieni. [18] And Timotheus they found not in occupation of that district, for he had then departed from the district without accomplishing anything, but had left behind a garrison, and that a very strong one, in a certain post. [19] But Dositheus and Sosipater, who were of Maccabaeus's captains, sallied forth and destroyed those that had been left by Timotheus in the stronghold, above ten thousand men. [20] And Maccabaeus, ranging his own army by bands, set †† these two over the bands, and marched in haste against Timotheus, who had with him a hundred and twenty thousand footmen and two thousand and five hundred horsemen. [21] But when Timotheus heard of the inroad of Judas, he at once sent away the women and the children and also the baggage into the fortress called ‡‡ Carnion; for the place was hard to besiege and difficult of access by reason of the narrowness of the approaches on all sides. [22] But when the band of Judas, who led the van, appeared in sight, and when terror came upon the enemy and fear, because the manifestation of him who beholdeth all things came upon them, they fled amain, carried this way and that, so that they were often hurt of their own men, and pierced with the points of their swords. [23] And Judas continued the pursuit the more hotly, putting the wicked wretches to the sword, and he destroyed as many as thirty thousand men. [24] But Timotheus himself, falling in with the company of Dositheus and Sosipater, besought them with much §§ crafty guile to let him go with his life, because he had in his power the parents of many of them and the brethren of some:  otherwise, said he, little regard will ††† be shewn to these. [25] So when he had with many words confirmed the agreement to restore them without hurt, they let him go that they might save their brethren.

[26] And Judas, marching against ‡‡‡ Carnion and the temple of Atergatis, slew five and twenty thousand persons. [27] And after he had put these to flight and destroyed them, he marched against Ephron also, a strong city, §§§ wherein were multitudes of people of all nations; and stalwart young men placed * on the walls made a vigorous defence; and there were great stores of engines and darts there. [28] But calling upon the Sovereign who with might breaketh in pieces the † strength of ‡ the enemy, they got the city into their hands, and slew as many as twenty and five thousand of them that were within. [29] And setting out from thence they marched in haste against Scythopolis, which is distant from Jerusalem six hundred furlongs. [30] But when the Jews that were settled there testified of the good will that the Scythopolitans had shewn toward them, and of their kindly bearing toward them in the times of their misfortune, [31] they gave thanks, and further exhorted them to remain well affected toward the race for the future; and [32] But after the feast called Pentecost they marched in haste against Gorgias the governor of Idumaea: [33] and he came out with three thousand footmen and four hundred horsemen. [34] And when they had set themselves in array, it came to pass that a few of the Jews fell. [35] And a certain Dositheus, one [§] of Bacenor's company, who was on horseback and a strong man, pressed hard on Gorgias, and taking hold of his cloke drew him along by main force; and while he was minded to take the accursed man alive, one of the Thracian horsemen bore down upon him and disabled his shoulder, and so Gorgias escaped unto [] Marisa. [36] And when they that were with Esdris had been fighting long and were wearied out, Judas called upon the Lord to shew himself, fighting on their side and leading the van of the battle; [37] and then in the language of his fathers he raised the battle-cry joined with hymns, and rushing unawares upon the troops of Gorgias put them to flight.

[38] And Judas gathering his army came unto the city of [††] Adullam; and as the seventh day was coming on, they purified themselves according to the custom, and kept the sabbath there. [39] And on the day following, [‡‡] at which time it had become necessary, Judas and his company came to take up the bodies of them that had fallen, [§§] and in company with their kinsmen to bring them back unto the sepulchres of their fathers. [40] But under the garments of each one of the dead they found [] consecrated tokens of the idols of Jamnia, which the law forbids the Jews to have aught to do with; and it became clear to all that it was for this cause that they had fallen. [41] All therefore, blessing the works of the Lord, the righteous Judge, who maketh manifest the things that are hid, [42] betook themselves unto supplication, beseeching that the sin committed might be wholly blotted out. And the noble Judas exhorted the multitude to keep themselves from sin, forsomuch as they had seen before their eyes what things had come to pass because of the sin of them that had fallen. [43] And when he had made a collection man by man to the sum of two thousand drachmas of silver, he sent unto Jerusalem to offer a sacrifice for sin, doing therein right well and honourably, in that he took thought for a resurrection. [44] For if he were not expecting that they that had fallen would rise again, it were superfluous and idle to pray for the dead. [45] (And if he did it looking unto an honourable memorial of gratitude laid up for them that [†††] die [‡‡‡] in godliness, holy and godly was the thought.) Wherefore he made the propitiation for them that had died, that they might be released from their sin.

thought that he would be set over the government. [4] But the King of kings stirred up the [†] passion of Antiochus against the wicked wretch; and when Lysias informed him that this man was the cause of all the evils, the king commanded to bring him unto Beroea, and [‡] to put him to death after the manner of that place. [5] Now there is in that place a tower of fifty cubits high, full of ashes, and it had all round it a [§] gallery [] descending sheer on every side into the ashes. [6] Here him that is guilty of sacrilege, or hath attained a preeminence in any other evil deeds, they [††] all push forward into destruction. [7] By such a fate it befell the breaker of the law, Menelaus, to die, without obtaining so much as a grave in the earth, and that right justly; [8] for inasmuch as he had perpetrated many sins [‡‡] against the altar, whose fire and whose ashes were holy, in ashes did he receive his death.

[9] Now the king, [§§] infuriated in spirit, was coming with intent to inflict on the Jews the very worst of the sufferings that had befallen them in his father's time. [10] But when Judas heard of these things, he gave charge to the multitude to call upon the Lord day and night, beseeching him, if ever at any other time, so now to succour them that were at the point to be deprived of the law and their country and the holy temple, [11] and not to suffer the people that had been but now a little while revived to fall into the hands of those profane heathen. [12] So when they had all done the same thing together, [] beseeching the merciful Lord with weeping and fastings and prostration for three days without ceasing, Judas exhorted them and commanded they should join him for service. [13] And having gone apart with the elders he resolved that, before the king's army should enter into Judaea and make themselves masters of the city, they should go forth and try the matter in fight by the help of [†††] God. [14] And committing the decision to the [‡‡‡] Lord of the world, and exhorting them that were with him to contend nobly even unto death for laws, temple, city, country, [§§§] commonwealth, he pitched his camp by Modin. the worse, [23] heard that Philip who had been left as chancellor in Antioch had become reckless, was confounded, made to the Jews an overture of peace, submitted himself and sware to acknowledge all their rights, came to terms with them and offered sacrifice, honoured the sanctuary and the place, [24] shewed kindness and graciously received Maccabaeus, left Hegemonides governor from Ptolemais even unto the [§§] Gerrenians, [25] came to Ptolemais. [1] Now after a space of three years tidings were brought to Judas and his company that Demetrius the son of Seleucus, having sailed into the haven of Tripolis with a mighty host and a fleet, [2] had gotten possession of the country, having made away with Antiochus and Lysias his guardian.

[3] But one Alcimus, who had formerly been high priest, and had wilfully polluted himself in the times when there was no mingling with the Gentiles, considering that there was no deliverance for him in any way, nor any more access unto the holy altar, [4] came to king Demetrius in about the hundred and one and fiftieth year, presenting to him a chaplet of gold and a palm, and beside these some of the festal olive boughs of the temple. And for that day he held his peace; [5] but having gotten opportunity to further his own madness, being called by Demetrius into a meeting of his council, and asked how the Jews stood affected and what they purposed, he answered thereunto. [6] Those of the Jews that he called [*] Hasidaeans, whose leader is Judas Maccabaeus, keep up war, and are seditious, not suffering the kingdom to find tranquillity. [7] Wherefore, having laid aside mine ancestral glory, I mean the high priesthood, I am now come [†] hither; [8] first for the unfeigned care I have for the things that concern the king, and secondly because I have regard also to mine own fellow-citizens: for, through the unadvised dealing of those of whom I spake before, our whole race is in no small misfortune. [9] But do thou, O king, having informed thyself of these things severally, take thought both for our country and for our race, which [‡] is surrounded by foes, according to the gracious kindness with which thou receivest all. [10] For as long as Judas remaineth alive, it is impossible that the state should find peace. [11] And when he had spoken such words as these, at once [§] the rest of the king's [] Friends, having ill will against Judas, inflamed Demetrius yet more. [12] And forthwith appointing Nicanor, who had been master of the elephants, and making him governor of Judaea, he sent him forth, [13] giving him written instructions to make away with Judas himself and to scatter them that were with him, and to set up Alcimus as high priest of the [††] great temple. into exile thronged to Nicanor in flocks, supposing that the misfortunes and calamities of the Jews would be successes to themselves.

[15] But when the Jews heard of Nicanor's inroad and the assault of the heathen, they sprinkled earth upon their heads and made solemn supplication to him who had established his own people for evermore, and who alway, making manifest his presence, upholdeth them that are his own portion. [16] [] And when the leader had given his commands, he straightway setteth out from thence, and joineth battle with them at a village called Lessau. [17] But Simon, the brother of Judas, had encountered Nicanor, [†††] yet not till late, having received a check by reason of the sudden consternation caused by his adversaries.

[18] Nevertheless Nicanor, hearing of the manliness of them that were with Judas, and their courage in fighting for their country, shrank from bringing the matter to the decision of the sword. [19] Wherefore he sent Posidonius and Theodotus and Mattathias to give and receive pledges of friendship. [20] So when these proposals had been long considered, and the leader had made the [‡‡‡] troops acquainted therewith, and it appeared that they were all of like mind, they consented to the covenants. [21] And they appointed a day on which to meet together by themselves. And a litter was borne forward from each army; they set chairs of state; [22] Judas stationed armed men ready in convenient places, lest haply there should suddenly be treachery on the part of the enemy; they held such conference as was meet. [23] Nicanor tarried in Jerusalem, and did nothing to cause disturbance, but dismissed the flocks of people that had gathered together. [24] And he kept Judas always in his presence; he had gained a hearty affection for the man; [25] he urged him to marry and beget children; he married, settled quietly, took part in common life.

[26] But Alcimus, perceiving the good will that was betwixt them, [§§§] and having got possession of the covenants that had been made, came unto Demetrius and told him that Nicanor was ill affected toward the state, for he had appointed that conspirator against his kingdom, Judas, to be his successor. [27] And the king, falling into a rage, and being exasperated by the calumnnies of that most wicked man, wrote to Nicanor, signifying that he was displeased at the covenants, and commanding him to send Maccabaeus prisoner unto Antioch in all haste. [28] And when this message came to Nicanor, he was confounded, and was sore troubled at the thought of annulling the articles that had been agreed upon, the man having done no wrong; [29] but because there was no dealing against the king, he watched his time to execute this purpose by stratagem. [30] But Maccabaeus, when he perceived that Nicanor was behaving more harshly in his dealings with him, and that he had become ruler in his customary bearing, understanding that this harshness came not of good, gathered together not a few of his men, and concealed himself from Nicanor.

[31] But the other, [*] when he became aware that he had been bravely defeated by the stratagem of [†] Judas, came to the [‡] great and holy temple, while the priests were offering the usual sacrifices, and commanded them to deliver up the man. [32] And when they declared with oaths that they had no knowledge where the man was whom he sought, [33] he stretched forth his right hand toward the sanctuary, and sware this oath: If ye will not deliver up to me Judas as a prisoner, I will lay this [§] temple of God even with the ground, and will break down the altar, and I will erect here a temple unto [] Bacchus for all to see. [34] And having said this, he departed. But the priests, stretching forth their hands toward heaven, called upon him that ever fighteth for our nation, in these words: [35] Thou, [††] O Lord of the universe, who in thyself hast need of nothing, wast well pleased that a sanctuary of thy [‡‡] habitation should be set among us; [36] so now, O holy Lord of all hallowing, keep undefiled for ever this house that hath been lately cleansed.

[37] Now information was given to Nicanor against one Razis, an elder of Jerusalem, [§§] as being a lover of his countrymen and a man of very good report, and one called Father of the Jews for his good will toward them. [38] For in the former times when there was no mingling with the Gentiles he had been accused of cleaving to the Jews' religion, and had jeoparded body and life with all earnestness for the religion of the Jews. [39] And Nicanor, wishing to make evident the ill will that he bare unto the Jews, sent above five hundred soldiers to take him; [40] for he thought by taking him to inflict a calamity upon them. [41] But when the [] troops were on the point of taking the tower, and were forcing the door of the court, and bade bring fire and burn the doors, he being surrounded on every side fell upon his sword, [42] choosing rather to die nobly than to fall into the hands of the wicked wretches, and suffer outrage unworthy of his own nobleness: [43] but since he missed his stroke through the excitement of the struggle, and the crowds were now rushing within the door, he ran bravely up to the wall and cast himself down manfully among the crowds. [44] But as they quickly gave back, a space was made, and he fell on the middle of [†††] his side. [45] And having yet breath within him, and being inflamed with passion, he rose up, and though his blood gushed out in streams and his wounds were grievous, he ran through the crowds, and standing upon a steep rock, [46] when as his blood was now well nigh spent, he drew forth his bowels through the wound, and taking them in both his hands he shook them at the crowds; and calling upon him who is Lord of [‡‡‡] the life and the [§§§] spirit to restore him [*] these again, he thus died.

[1] But Nicanor, hearing that Judas and his company were in the region of Samaria, resolved to set upon them with all security on the day of rest. [6] And Nicanor, § bearing himself haughtily in all vaingloriousness, had determined to set up a monument of complete victory over Judas and all them that were with him: [7] but Maccabaeus still trusted unceasingly, with all hope that he should obtain help from the Lord. [8] And he exhorted his company not to be fearful at the  inroad of the heathen, but, keeping in mind the help which of old they had oftentimes received from heaven, so now also to look for the victory which would come unto them from the Almighty; [9] and comforting them out of the law and the prophets, and withal putting them in mind of the conflicts that they had maintained, he made them more eager for the battle. [10] And when he had roused their †† spirit, he gave them his commands, at the same time pointing out the perfidiousness of the heathen and their breach of their oaths. [11] And arming each one of them, not so much with the sure defence of shields and spears as with the encouragement that lieth in good words, and moreover relating to them a dream ‡‡ worthy to be believed, he made them all exceeding glad. [12] And the vision of that dream was this: He saw Onias, him that was high priest, a noble and good man, reverend in bearing, yet gentle in manner and well-spoken, and exercised from a child in all points of virtue, with outstretched hands invoking blessings on the whole body of the Jews: [13] thereupon he saw a man appear, of venerable age and exceeding glory, and wonderful and most majestic was the dignity around him: [14] and Onias answered and said, This is the lover of the brethren, he who prayeth much for the people and the holy city, Jeremiah the prophet of God: [15] and Jeremiah stretching forth his right hand delivered to Judas a sword of gold, and in giving it addressed him thus, [16] Take the holy sword, a gift from God, wherewith thou shalt smite down the adversaries.

[17] And being encouraged by the words of Judas, which were of a lofty strain, and able to incite unto virtue and to stir the souls of the young unto manly courage, they determined §§ not to carry on a campaign, but nobly to bear down upon the enemy, and fighting hand to hand with all courage bring the matter to an issue, because the city and the sanctuary and the temple were in danger. [18] For their fear for wives and children, and furthermore for brethren and kinsfolk, was in less account with them; but greatest and first was their fear for the consecrated sanctuary. [19] And they also that were shut up in the city were in no light distress, being troubled because of the encounter in the open ground.

[20] And when all were now waiting for the decision of the issue, and the enemy had already joined battle, and the army had been set in array, and the  elephants ††† brought back to a convenient post, and the horsemen drawn up ‡‡‡ on the flank, [21] Maccabaeus, perceiving the presence of the §§§ troops, and the various arms with which they were equipped, and the savageness of the * elephants, holding up his hands unto heaven called upon the Lord that worketh wonders, recognising that success cometh not by arms, but that, according as the Lord shall judge, he gaineth the victory for them that

[22] And calling upon God he said after this manner: Thou, O Sovereign Lord, didst send thine angel in the time of Hezekiah king of Judaea, and he slew of the [†] host of Sennacherib as many as a hundred fourscore and five thousand; [23] so now also, O Sovereign of the heavens, send a good angel before us to bring terror and trembling: [24] through the greatness of thine arm let them be stricken with dismay that with blasphemy are come hither against thy holy people. And as he ended with these words, [25] Nicanor and his company advanced with trumpets and paeans; [26] but Judas and his company joined battle with the enemy with invocation and prayers. [27] And contending with their hands, and praying unto God with their hearts, they slew no less than thirty and five thousand men, being made exceeding glad by the manifestation of God.

[28] And when the engagement was over, and they were returning again with joy, they recognised Nicanor lying dead in full armour; [29] and there arose a shout and [‡] tumult, and then they blessed the Sovereign Lord in the language of their fathers. [30] And he that in all things was in body and soul the foremost champion of his fellow-citizens, he that kept through life the good will of his youth toward his countrymen, commanded to cut off Nicanor's head, and his hand with the shoulder, and bring them to Jerusalem. [31] And when he had arrived there, and had called his countrymen together and set the priests before the altar, he sent for them that were in the citadel; [32] and shewing the head of the vile Nicanor, and the hand of that profane man, which with proud brags he had stretched out against the holy house of the Almighty, [33] and cutting out the tongue of the impious Nicanor, he said that he would give [§] it by pieces to the birds, and hang up the [] rewards of his madness over against the sanctuary. [36] And they all ordained with a common decree in no wise to let this day pass undistinguished, but to mark with honour the thirteenth day of the twelfth month (it is called Adar in the Syrian tongue), the day before the day of Mordecai.

[37] THIS then having been the issue of the attempt of Nicanor, and the city having from those times been held by the Hebrews, I also will here make an end of my book. [38] And if I have written well and to the point in my story, this is what I myself desired; but if meanly and indifferently, this is all I could attain unto. [39] For as it is [‡‡] distasteful to drink wine alone and in like manner again to drink water alone, [§§] while the mingling of wine with water at once [] giveth full pleasantness to the flavour; so also the fashioning of the language delighteth the ears of them that read the story.

And here shall be the end.

1 ESDRAS.

[1] AND ✡ Josias held the passover in Jerusalem unto his Lord, and offered the passover the fourteenth day of the first month; [2] having set the priests according to their daily courses, being arrayed in their vestments, in the temple of the Lord. [3] And he spake unto the Levites, * the temple-servants of Israel, that they should hallow themselves unto the Lord, to set the holy ark of the Lord in the house that King Solomon the son of David had built: [4] and said, Ye shall no more have need to bear it upon your shoulders: now therefore serve the Lord your God, and minister unto his people Israel, and prepare you after your fathers' houses and kindreds, [5] according to the writing of David king of Israel, and according to the magnificence of Solomon his son: and standing in the holy place according to the several divisions of the families of you the Levites, who minister in the presence of your brethren the children of Israel, [6] offer the passover in order, and make ready the sacrifices for your brethren, and keep the passover according to the commandment of the Lord, which was given unto Moses. [7] And unto the people which were present Josias gave thirty thousand lambs and kids, and three thousand calves: these things were given of the king's substance, according as he promised, to the people, and to the priests and Levites. [8] And Helkias, and Zacharias, and † Esyelus, the rulers of the temple, gave to the priests for the passover two thousand and six hundred sheep, and three hundred calves. [9] And Jeconias, and Samaias and Nathanael his brother, and Sabias, and Ochielus, and Joram, captains over thousands, gave to the Levites for the passover five thousand sheep, and seven hundred calves. [10] And when these things were done, the priests and Levites, having the unleavened bread, stood in comely order according to the kindreds, [11] and according to the several divisions by fathers' houses, before the people, to offer to the Lord, as it is written in the book of Moses: and thus did they in the morning. [12] And they roasted the passover with fire, as appertaineth: and the sacrifices they sod in the brazen vessels and caldrons with a good savour, [13] and set them before all the people: and afterward they prepared for themselves, and for the priests their brethren, the sons of Aaron. [14] For the priests offered the fat until night: and the Levites prepared for themselves, and for the priests their brethren, the sons of Aaron. [15] The holy singers also, the sons of Asaph, were in their order, according to the appointment of David, to wit, Asaph, Zacharias, and Eddinus, who ‡ was of the king's retinue. [16] Moreover the porters were at every gate; none had need to depart from his daily course: for their brethren the Levites prepared for them. [17] Thus were the things that belonged to the sacrifices of the Lord accomplished in that day, in holding the passover, [18] and offering sacrifices upon the altar of the Lord, according to the commandment of King Josias. [19] So the children of Israel which were present at that time held the passover, and the feast of unleavened bread seven days. [20] And such a passover was not held in Israel since the time of the prophet Samuel. [21] Yea, all the kings of Israel held not such a passover as Josias, and the priests, and the Levites, and the Jews, held with all Israel that were present in their dwelling place at Jerusalem. [22] In the eighteenth year of the reign of Josias was this passover held. [23] And the works of Josias were upright before his Lord with a heart full of godliness. [24] Moreover the things that came to pass in his days have been written in times past, concerning those that sinned, and did wickedly against the Lord above every people and kingdom, and how they grieved him § exceedingly, so that the words of the Lord were confirmed against Israel.

[25] ✡ Now after all these acts of Josias it came to pass, that Pharaoh the king of Egypt came to raise war at Carchemish upon Euphrates: and Josias went out against him. [26] But the king of Egypt sent to him, saying, What have I to do with thee, O king of Judaea? [27] I am not sent out from the Lord God against thee; for my war is upon Euphrates: and now the Lord is with me, yea, the Lord is with me hasting me forward: depart from me, and be not against the Lord. [28] Howbeit Josias did not turn back  unto his chariot, but undertook to fight with him, not regarding the words of the prophet Jeremy spoken by the mouth of the Lord: [29] but joined battle with him in the plain of Megiddo, and the princes came down against King Josias. [30] Then said the king unto his servants, Carry me away out of the battle; for I am very weak. And immediately his servants carried him away out of the host. [31] Then gat he up upon his second chariot; and being brought back to Jerusalem he died, and was buried in the sepulchre of his fathers. [32] And in all Jewry they mourned for Josias; and Jeremy the prophet lamented for Josias, and the chief men with the women made lamentation for him, unto this day: and this was given out for an ordinance to be done continually in all the nation of Israel. [33] These things are written in the book of the histories of the kings of Judea, and every one of the acts that Josias did, and his glory, and his understanding in the law of the Lord, and the things that he had done before, and the things now recited, are reported in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah.

[34] ✡ And the people took †† Joachaz the son of Josias, and made him king instead of Josias his father, when he was twenty and three years old. [35] And he reigned in ‡‡ Judah and in Jerusalem three months: and then the king of Egypt deposed him from reigning in Jerusalem. [36] And he set a tax upon the people of a hundred talents of silver and one talent of gold. [37] The king of Egypt also made King Joakim his brother king of Judaea and Jerusalem. [38] And Joakim bound the nobles: but Zarakes his brother he apprehended, and brought him up out of Egypt. [39] Five and twenty years old was ✡ Joakim when he began to reign in Judaea and Jerusalem; and he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord. [40] And against him Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon came up, and bound him with a chain of brass, and carried him unto Babylon. [41] Nabuchodonosor also took of the holy vessels of the Lord, and carried them away, and set them up in his own temple at Babylon. [42] But those things that are reported of him, and of his uncleanness and impiety, are written in the chronicles of the kings. [43] And Joakim his son reigned in his stead: for when he was made king he was §§ eighteen years old; [44] and he reigned three months and ten days in Jerusalem; and did that which was evil before the Lord.

[45] So after a year Nabuchodonosor sent and caused him to be brought unto Babylon with the holy vessels of the Lord; [46] and made Sedekias king of Judaea and Jerusalem, when he was one and twenty years old; and he reigned eleven years: [47] and he also did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, and cared not for the words that were spoken by Jeremy the prophet from the mouth of the Lord. [48] And after that king Nabuchodonosor had made him to swear by the name of the Lord, he forswore himself, and rebelled; and hardening his neck, and his heart, he transgressed the laws of the Lord, the God of Israel. [49] Moreover the governors of the people and of the priests did many things wickedly,  and passed all the pollutions of all nations, and defiled the temple of the Lord, which was sanctified in Jerusalem. [50] And the God of their fathers sent by his messenger to call them back, because he had compassion on them and on his dwelling place. [51] But they mocked his messengers; and in the day when the Lord spake unto them, they scoffed at his prophets: [52] so far forth, that he, being wroth with his people for their great ungodliness, commanded to bring up the kings of the Chaldeans against them; [53] who slew their young men with the sword, round about their holy temple, and spared neither young man nor maid, old man nor child; but he delivered all into their hands. [54] And they took all the holy vessels of the Lord, both great and small, with ††† the vessels of the ark of the Lord, and the king's treasures, and carried them away unto Babylon. [55] And they burnt the house of the Lord, and brake down the walls of Jerusalem, and burnt the towers thereof with fire: [56] and as for her glorious things, they never ceased till they had brought them all to nought: and the people that were not slain with the sword he carried unto Babylon: [57] and they were servants unto him and unto his children, till the Persians reigned, to fulfil the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremy: [58] Until the land hath enjoyed her sabbaths, the whole time of her desolation shall she keep sabbath, to fulfil threescore and ten years.

[1] In the ✡ first year of Cyrus king of the Persians, that the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremy might be accomplished, [2] the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of the Persians, and he made proclamation through all his kingdom, and also by writing, [3] saying, Thus saith Cyrus king of the Persians; The Lord of Israel, the Most High Lord, hath made me king of the whole world, [4] and commanded me to build him a house at Jerusalem that is in Judaea. [5] If therefore there be any of you that are of his people, * let the Lord, even his Lord, be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem that is in Judaea, and build the house of the Lord of Israel: he is the Lord that dwelleth in Jerusalem. [6] Of such therefore as dwell in divers places, let them that are in his own place help each one with gold, and with silver, [7] with gifts, with horses also and cattle, beside the other things which have been added by vow for the temple of the Lord which is in Jerusalem.

[8] Then the chief of the families of Judah and of the tribe of Benjamin stood up; the priests also, and the Levites, and all they whose spirit the Lord had stirred to go up, to build the house for the Lord which is in Jerusalem. [9] And they that dwelt round about them helped them in all things with silver and gold, with horses and cattle, and with very many gifts that were vowed of a great number whose minds were stirred up thereto. [10] King

Cyrus also brought forth the holy vessels of the Lord, which Nabuchodonosor had carried away from Jerusalem, and had set up in his temple of idols. [11] Now when Cyrus king of the Persians had brought them forth, he delivered them to Mithradates his treasurer, [12] and by him they were delivered to † Sanabassar the governor of Judaea. [13] And this was the number of them: A thousand golden cups, a thousand cups of silver, censers of silver twenty nine, vials of gold thirty, and of silver two thousand four hundred and ten, and other vessels a thousand. [14] So all the vessels of gold and of silver were brought up, even five thousand four hundred threescore and nine, [15] and were carried back by Sanabassar, together with them of the captivity, from Babylon to Jerusalem.

[16] ✡ But in the time of Artaxerxes king of the Persians Belemus, and Mithradates, and Tabellius, and ‡ Rathumus, and Beeltethmus, and § Samellius the scribe, with the others that were in commission with them, dwelling in Samaria and other places, wrote unto him against them that dwelt in Judaea and Jerusalem the letter following: [17] To king Artaxerxes our Lord, Thy servants, Rathumus the  storywriter, and Samellius the scribe, and the rest of their council, and the judges that are in Coelesyria and Phoenicia. [18] Be it now known to our lord the king, that the Jews that are come up from you to us, being come unto Jerusalem, do build that rebellious and wicked city, and do repair the marketplaces and the walls of it, and do lay the foundation of a temple. [19] Now if this city be builded and the walls thereof be finished, they will not only refuse to give tribute, but will even stand up against kings. [20] And forasmuch as the things pertaining to the temple are now in hand, we think it meet not to neglect such a matter, [21] but to speak unto our lord the king, to the intent that, if it be thy pleasure, search may be made in the books of thy fathers: [22] and thou shalt find in the chronicles what is written concerning these things, and shalt understand that that city was rebellious, troubling both kings and cities: [23] and that the Jews were rebellious, and raised always wars therein of old time; for the which cause even this city was laid waste. [24] Wherefore now we do declare unto thee, O lord the king, that if this city be builded again, and the walls thereof set up anew, thou shalt from henceforth have no passage into Coelesyria and Phoenicia. [25] Then the king wrote back again to Rathumus the storywriter, and Beeltethmus, and Samellius the scribe, and to the rest that were in commission, and dwelt in Samaria and Syria and Phoenicia, after this manner: [26] I have read the epistle which ye have sent unto me: therefore I commanded to make search, and it hath been found that that city of old time hath made insurrection against kings; [27] and the men were given to rebellion and war therein: and that mighty kings and fierce were in Jerusalem, who reigned and exacted tribute in Coelesyria and Phoenicia. [28] Now therefore I have commanded to hinder those men from building the city, and heed to be taken that there be nothing done contrary to this order; [29] and that those wicked doings proceed no further to the annoyance of kings. [30] Then king Artaxerxes his letters being read, Rathumus, and Samellius the scribe, and the rest that were in commission with them, removing in haste unto Jerusalem with horsemen and a multitude of people in battle array, began to hinder the builders; and the building of the temple in Jerusalem ceased until the second year of the reign of Darius king of the Persians.

[1] Now king Darius made a great feast unto all his subjects, and unto all that were born in his house, and unto all the princes of Media and of Persia, [2] and to all the satraps and captains and governors that were under him, from India unto Ethiopia, in the hundred twenty and seven provinces. [3] And when they had eaten and drunken, and being satisfied were gone home, then Darius the king went into his bedchamber, and slept, and awaked out of his sleep.

[4] Then the three young men of the body-guard, that kept the king's person, spake one to another: [5] Let every one of us say one thing which shall be strongest: and he whose sentence shall seem wiser than the others, unto him shall Darius the king give great gifts, and great honours in token of victory: [6] as, to be clothed in purple, to drink in gold, and to sleep upon gold, and a chariot with bridles of gold, and a headtire of fine linen, and a chain about his neck: [7] and he shall sit next to Darius because of his wisdom, and shall be called Darius his cousin. [8] And then they wrote every one his sentence, and set to their seals, and laid the writing under king Darius his pillow, [9] and said, When the king is risen, some shall give him the writing; and of whose side the king and the three princes of Persia shall judge that his sentence is the wisest, to him shall the victory be given, as it is written. [10] The first wrote, Wine is the strongest. [11] The second wrote, The king is strongest. [12] The third wrote, Women are strongest: but above all things Truth beareth away the victory.

[13] Now when the king was risen up, they took the writing, and gave it unto him, and so he read it: [14] and sending forth he called all the princes of Persia and of Media, and the satraps, and the captains, and the governors, and the chief officers; [15] and sat him down in the royal seat of judgment; and the writing was read before them. [16] And he said, Call the young men, and they shall explain their own sentences. So they were called, and came in. [17] And they said unto them, Declare unto us your mind concerning the things ye have written.

Then began the first, who had spoken of the strength of wine, [18] and said thus, O sirs, how exceeding strong is wine! it causeth all men to err that drink it: [19] it maketh the mind of the king and of the fatherless child to be all one; of the bondman and of the freeman, of the poor man and of the rich: [20] it turneth also every thought into jollity and mirth, so that a man remembereth neither sorrow nor debt: [21] and it maketh every heart rich, so that a man remembereth neither king nor satrap; and it maketh to speak all things by talents: [22] and when they are in their cups, they forget their love both to friends and brethren, and a little after draw their swords: [23] but when they awake from their wine, they remember not what they have done. [24] O sirs, is not wine the strongest, seeing that it enforceth to do thus? And when he had so spoken, he held his peace.

[1] Then the second, that had spoken of the strength of the king, began to say, [2] O sirs, do not men excel in strength, that bear rule over the sea and land, and all things in them? [3] But yet is the king stronger: and he is their lord, and hath dominion over them; and in whatsoever he commandeth them they obey him. [4] If he bid them make war the one against the other, they do it: and if he send them out against the enemies, they go, and overcome mountains, walls, and towers. [5] They slay and are slain, and transgress not the king's commandment: if they get the victory, they bring all to the king, as well the spoil, as all things else. [6] Likewise for those that are no soldiers, and have not to do with wars, but use husbandry, when they have reaped again that which they had sown, they bring it to the king, and compel one another to pay tribute unto the king. [7] And he is [*] but one man: if he command to kill, they kill; if he command to spare, they spare; [8] if he command to smite, they smite; if he command to make desolate, they make desolate; if he command to build, they build; [9] if he command to cut down, they cut down; if he command to plant, they plant. [10] So all his people and his armies obey him: furthermore he lieth down, he eateth and drinketh, and taketh his rest: [11] and these keep watch round about him, neither may any one depart, and do his own business, neither disobey they him in anything. [12] O sirs, how should not the king be strongest, seeing that in such sort he is obeyed? And he held his peace.

[13] Then the third, who had spoken of women, and of truth, (this was Zorobabel) began to speak. [14] O sirs, is not the king great, and men are many, and wine is strong? who is it then that ruleth them, or hath the lordship over them? are they not women? [15] Women have borne the king and all the people that bear rule by sea and land. [16] Even of them came they: and they nourished them up that planted the vineyards, from whence the wine cometh. [17] These also make garments for men; these bring glory unto men; and without women cannot men be. [18] Yea, and if men have gathered together gold and silver and any other goodly thing, [†] and see a woman which is comely in favour and beauty, [19] they let all those things go, and gape after her, and even with open mouth fix their eyes fast on her; and have all more desire unto her than unto gold or silver, or any goodly thing whatsoever. [20] A man leaveth his own father that brought him up, and his own country, and cleaveth unto his wife. [21] And with his wife he endeth his days, and remembereth neither father, nor mother, nor country. [22] By this also ye must know that women have dominion over you: do ye not labor and toil, and give and bring all to women? [23] Yea, a man taketh his sword, and goeth forth to make outroads, and to rob and to steal, and to sail upon the sea and upon rivers; [24] and looketh upon a lion, and walketh in the darkness; and when he hath stolen, spoiled, and robbed, he bringeth it to his love. [25] Wherefore a man loveth his wife better than father or mother. [26] Yea, many there be that have run out of their wits for women, and become bondmen for their sakes. [27] Many also have perished, have stumbled, and sinned, for women. [28] And now do ye not believe me? is not the king great in his power? do not all regions fear to touch him? [29] Yet did I see him and Apame the king's concubine, the daughter of the illustrious Barticus, sitting at the right hand of the king, [30] and taking the crown from the king's head, and setting it upon her own head; yea, she struck the king with her left hand: [31] and therewithal the king gaped and gazed upon her with open mouth: if she laughed upon him, he laughed also: but if she took any displeasure at him, he was fain to flatter, that she might be reconciled to him again. [32] O sirs, how can it be but women should be strong, seeing they do thus?

[33] Then the king and the nobles looked one upon another: so he began to speak concerning truth. [34] O sirs, are not women strong? great is the earth, high is the heaven, swift is the sun in his course, for he compasseth the heavens round about, and fetcheth his course again to his own place in one day. [35] Is he not great that maketh these things? therefore great is truth, and stronger than all things. [36] All the earth calleth upon truth, and the heaven blesseth her: all works shake and tremble, but with ‡ her is no unrighteous thing. [37] Wine is unrighteous, the king is unrighteous, women are unrighteous, all the children of men are unrighteous, and unrighteous are all such their works; and there is no truth in them; in their unrighteousness also they shall perish. [38] But truth abideth, and is strong forever; she liveth and conquereth forevermore. [39] With her there is no accepting of persons or rewards; but she doeth the things that are just, and refraineth from all unrighteous and wicked things; and all men do well like of her works. [40] Neither in her judgment is any unrighteousness; and she is the strength, and the kingdom, and the power, and the majesty, of all ages. Blessed be the God of truth. [41] And with that he held his tongue. And all the people then shouted, and said, Great is truth, and strong above all things.

[42] Then said the king unto him, Ask what thou wilt more than is appointed in writing, and we will give it thee, inasmuch as thou art found wisest; and thou shalt sit next me, and shalt be called my cousin. [43] Then said he unto the king, Remember thy vow, which thou didst vow to build Jerusalem, in the day when thou camest to thy kingdom, [44] and to send away all the vessels that were taken out of Jerusalem, which Cyrus set apart, when he vowed to destroy Babylon, and vowed to send them again thither. [45] Thou didst also vow to build up the temple, which the Edomites burned when Judaea was made desolate by the Chaldeans. [46] And now, O lord the king, this is that which I require, and which I desire of thee, and this is the princely liberality that shall proceed from thee: I pray therefore that thou make good the vow, the performance whereof thou hast vowed to the King of heaven with thine own mouth.

[47] Then Darius the king stood up, and kissed him, and wrote letters for him unto all the treasurers and governors and captains and satraps, that they should safely bring on their way both him, and all those that should go up with him to build Jerusalem. [48] He wrote letters also unto all the governors that were in Coelesyria and Phoenicia, and unto them in Libanus, that they should bring cedar wood from Libanus unto Jerusalem, and that they should build the city with him. [49] Moreover he wrote for all the Jews that should go out of his realm up into Jewry, concerning their freedom, that no officer, no governor, no satrap, nor treasurer, should forcibly enter into their doors; [50] and that all the country which they occupied should be free to them without tribute; and that the Edomites should give over the villages of the Jews which then they held: [51] and that there should be yearly given twenty talents to the building of the temple, until the time that it were built; [52] and other ten talents yearly, for burnt offerings to be presented upon the altar every day, as they had a commandment to offer seventeen: [53] and that all they that should come from Babylonia to build the city should have their freedom, as well they as their posterity, and all the priests that came. [54] He wrote also to give them their charges, and the priests' vestments wherein they minister; [55] and for the Levites he wrote that their charges should be given them until the day that the house were finished, and Jerusalem builded up. [56] And he commanded to give to all that kept the city lands and wages. [57] He sent away also all the vessels from Babylon, that Cyrus had set apart; and all that Cyrus had given in commandment, the same charged he also to be done, and sent unto Jerusalem.

[58] Now when this young man was gone forth, he lifted up his face to heaven toward Jerusalem, and praised the King of heaven, [59] and said, From thee cometh victory, from thee cometh wisdom, and thine is the glory, and I am thy servant. [60] Blessed art thou, who hast given me wisdom: and to thee I give thanks, O Lord of our fathers. [61] And so he took the letters, and went out, and came unto Babylon, and told it all his brethren. [62] And they praised the God of their fathers, because he had given them freedom and liberty [63] to go up, and to build Jerusalem, and the temple which is called by his name: and they feasted with instruments of music and gladness seven days.

[1] After this were the chiefs of fathers' houses chosen to go up according to their tribes, with their wives and sons and daughters, with their menservants and maidservants, and their cattle. [2] And Darius sent with them a thousand horsemen, till they had brought them back to Jerusalem [*] safely, and with musical instruments, tabrets and flutes. [3] And all their brethren played, and he made them go up together with them.

[47] But when the seventh month was at hand, and when the children of Israel were every man in his own place, they came all together with one consent into the broad place before the first porch which is toward the east. [48] Then stood up Jesus the son of Josedek, and his brethren the priests, and Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, and his brethren, and made ready the altar of the God of Israel, [49] to offer burnt sacrifices upon it, according as it is expressly commanded in the book of Moses the man of God. [50] And certain were gathered unto them out of the other nations of the land, and they erected the altar upon its own place, because all the nations of the land were at enmity with them, and oppressed them; and they offered sacrifices according to the time, and burnt offerings to the Lord both morning and evening. [51] Also they held the feast of tabernacles, as it is commanded in the law, and offered sacrifices daily, as was meet: [52] and after that, the continual oblations, and the sacrifices of the sabbaths, and of the new moons, and of all the consecrated feasts. the temple of God was not yet built. [54] And they gave money unto the masons and carpenters; and meat and drink, [55] and cars unto them of Sidon and Tyre, that they should bring cedar trees from Libanus, and convey them in floats to the haven of Joppa, according to the commandment which was written for them by Cyrus king of the Persians. [56] And in the second year after his coming to the temple of God at Jerusalem, in the second month, began Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, and Jesus the son of Josedek, and their brethren, and the priests the Levites, and all they that were come unto Jerusalem out of the captivity: [57] and they laid the foundation of the temple of God on the new moon of the second month, in the second year after they were come to Jewry and Jerusalem. [58] ✡ And they appointed the Levites from twenty years old over the works of the Lord. Then stood up Jesus, and his sons and brethren, and Kadmiel his brother, and the sons of Jesus, Emadabun, and the sons of Joda the son of Iliadun, and their sons and brethren, all the Levites, with one accord setters forward of the business, labouring to advance the works in the house of God. So the builders builded the temple of the Lord. [59] And the priests stood arrayed in their vestments with musical instruments and trumpets, and the Levites the sons of Asaph with their cymbals, [60] singing songs of thanksgiving, and praising the Lord, after the order of David king of Israel. [61] And they sang aloud, praising the Lord in songs of thanksgiving, because his goodness and his glory are forever in all Israel. [62] And all the people sounded trumpets, and shouted with a loud voice, singing songs of thanksgiving unto the Lord for the rearing up of the house of the Lord. [63] ✡ Also of the priests the Levites, and of the heads of their families, the ancients who had seen the former house came to the building of this with lamentation and great weeping. [64] But many with trumpets and joy shouted with loud voice, [65] insomuch that the people heard not the trumpets for the weeping of the people: for the multitude sounded marvellously, so that it was heard afar off.

[66] ✡ Wherefore when the enemies of the tribe of Judah and Benjamin heard it, they came to know what that noise of trumpets should mean. [67] And they perceived that they that were of the captivity did build the temple unto the Lord, the God of Israel. [68] So they went to zorobabel and Jesus, and to the chief men of the families, and said unto them, we will build together with you. [69] For we likewise, as ye, do obey your Lord, and do sacrifice unto him from the days of  Asbasareth the king of the Assyrians, who brought us hither. [70] Then Zorobabel and Jesus and the chief men of the families of Israel said unto them, It is not †† for you to build the house unto the Lord our God. [71] We ourselves alone will build unto the Lord of Israel, according as Cyrus the king of the Persians hath commanded us. [72] But the heathen of the land lying heavy upon the inhabitants of Judaea, and ‡‡ holding them strait, hindered their building; [73] and §§ by their secret plots, and popular persuasions and commotions, they hindered the finishing of the building all the time that King Cyrus lived: so they were hindered from building for the space of two years, until the reign of Darius.

[1] Now [✡] in the second year of the reign of Darius, Aggaeus and Zacharius the son of [*] Addo, the prophets, prophesied unto the Jews in Jewry and Jerusalem; in the name of the Lord, the God of Israel, prophesied they unto them. [2] Then stood up Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, and Jesus the son of Josedek, and began to build the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, the prophets of the Lord being with them, and helping them. [3] [✡] At the same time came unto them [†] Sisinnes the governor of Syria and Phoenicia, with [‡] Sathrabuzanes and his companions, and said unto them, [4] By whose appointment do ye build this house and this roof, and perform all the other things? and who are the builders that perform these things? [5] Nevertheless the elders of the Jews obtained favour, because the Lord had visited the captivity; [6] and they were not hindered from building, until such time as communication was made unto Darius concerning them, and his answer signified.

[7] The copy of the letter which Sisinnes, governor of Syria and Phoenicia, and Sathrabuzanes, with their companions, the rulers in Syria and Phoenicia, wrote and sent unto Darius; [8] To king Darius, greeting: Let all things be known unto our lord the king, that being come into the country of Judaea, and entered into the city of Jerusalem, we found in the city of Jerusalem the elders of the Jews that were of the captivity [9] building a house unto the Lord, great and new, of hewn and costly stones, with timber laid in the walls. [10] And those works are done with great speed, and the work goeth on prosperously in their hands, and with all glory and diligence it is accomplished. [11] Then asked we these elders, saying, By whose commandment build ye this house, and lay the foundations of these works? [12] Therefore, to the intent that we might give knowledge unto thee by writing who were the chief doers, we questioned them, and we required of them the names in writing of their principal men. [13] So they gave us this answer, We are the servants of the Lord which made heaven and earth. [14] And as for this house, it was builded many years ago by a king of Israel great and strong, and was finished. [15] But when our fathers sinned against the Lord of Israel which is in heaven, and provoked him unto wrath, he gave them over into the hands of Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon, king of the Chaldeans; [16] and they pulled down the house, and burned it, and carried away the people captives unto Babylon. [17] But in the first year that Cyrus reigned over the country of Babylon, king Cyrus wrote to build up this house. [18] And the holy vessels of gold and of silver, that Nabuchodonosor had carried away out of the house at Jerusalem, and had set up in his own temple, those Cyrus the king brought forth again out of the temple in Babylonia, and they were delivered to Zorobabel and to [§] Sanabassarus the governor, [19] with commandment that he should carry away [] all these vessels, and put them in the temple at Jerusalem; and that the temple of the Lord should be built in its place. [20] Then Sanabassarus, being come hither, laid the foundations of the house of the Lord which is in Jerusalem; and from that time to this being still a building, it is not yet fully ended. [21] Now therefore, if it seem good, O king, let search be made among the royal archives of our lord the king that are in Babylon: [22] and if it be found that the building of the house of the Lord which is in Jerusalem hath been done with the consent of king Cyrus, and it seem good unto our lord the king, let him signify unto us thereof.

[23] ✡ Then commanded King Darius to seek among the archives that were laid up at Babylon: and so at Ekbatana the palace, which is in the country of Media, there was found a †† roll wherein these things were recorded. [24] In the first year of the reign of Cyrus king Cyrus commanded to build up the house of the Lord which is in Jerusalem, where they do sacrifice with continual fire: [25] whose height shall be sixty cubits, and the breadth sixty cubits, with three rows of hewn stones, and one row of new wood of that country; and the expenses therof to be given out of the house of king Cyrus: [26] and that the holy vessels of the house of the Lord, both gold and silver, that Nabuchodonosor took out of the house at Jerusalem, and carried away to Babylon, should be restored to the house at Jerusalem, and be set in the place where they were before. [27] And also he commanded that Sisinnes the governor of Syria and Phoenicia, and Sathrabuzanes, and their companions, and those which were appointed rulers in Syria and Phoenicia, should be careful not to meddle with the place, but suffer Zorobabel, the servant of the Lord, and governor of Judaea, and the elders of the Jews, to build that house of the Lord in its place. [28] And I also do command to have it built up whole again; and that they look diligently to help those that be of the captivity of Judaea, till the house of the Lord be finished: [29] and that out of the tribute of Coelesyria and Phoenicia a portion be carefully given these men for the sacrifices of the Lord, that is, to Zorobabel the governor, for bullocks, and rams, and lambs; [30] and also corn, salt, wine and oil, and that continually every year without further question, according as the priests that be in Jerusalem shall signify to be daily spent: [31] that drink offerings may be made to the Most High God for the king and for his children, and that they may pray for their lives. [32] And that commandment be given that whosoever shall transgress, yea, or neglect anything ‡‡ herein written, out of his own house shall a tree be taken, and he thereon be hanged, and all his goods seized for the king. [33] The Lord therefore, whose name is there called upon, utterly destroy every king and nation, that shall stretch out his hand to hinder or endamage that house of the Lord in Jerusalem. [34] I Darius the king have ordained that according unto these things it be done with diligence.

[1] Then ✡ Sisinnes the governor of Coelesyria and Phoenicia, and Sathrabuzanes, with their companions, following the commandments of king Darius, [2] did very carefully oversee the holy works, assisting the elders of the Jews and rulers of the temple. [3] And so the holy works prospered, while Aggaeus and Zacharias the prophets prophesied. [4] And they finished these things by the commandment of the Lord, the God of Israel, and with the consent of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerxes, kings of the Persians. [5] And thus was * the house finished by the three and twentieth day of the month Adar, in the sixth year of king Darius. [6] And the children of Israel, the priests, and the Levites, and the other that were of the captivity, that were added unto them, did according to the things written in the book of Moses. [10] And the children of Israel that came out of the captivity held the passover the fourteenth day of the first month, when the priests and the Levites were sanctified together, [11] ‡ and all they that were of the captivity; for they were sanctified. For the Levites were all sanctified together, [12] and they offered the passover for all them of the captivity, and for their brethren the priests, and for themselves. [13] And the children of Israel that came out of the captivity did eat, even all they that had separated themselves from the abominations of the heathen of the land, and sought the Lord. [14] And they kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days, making merry before the Lord, [15] for that he had turned the counsel of the king of Assyria toward them, to strengthen their hands in the works of the Lord, the God of Israel.

[1] ✡ And after these things, when Artaxerxes the king of the Persians reigned, came Ezdras the son of Azaraias, the son of Zechrias, the son of Helkias, the son of Salem, [2] the son of Sadduk, the son of Ahitob, the son of Amarias, the son of Ozias, * the son of Memeroth, the son of Zaraias, the son of Savias, the son of Boccas, the son of Abisne, the son of Phinees, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron, the chief priest. [3] This Esdras went up from Babylon, as being a ready scribe in the law of Moses, that was given by the God of Israel. [4] And the king did him honour: for he found grace in his sight in all his requests. [5] There went up with him also certain of the children of Israel, and of the priests, and Levites, and holy singers, and porters, and † temple servants, unto Jerusalem, [6] in the seventh year of the reign of Artaxerxes, in the fifth month, this was the king's seventh year; for they went from Babylon on the new moon of the first month, and came to Jerusalem, according to the prosperous journey which the Lord gave them ‡ for his sake. [7] For Esdras had very great skill, so that he omitted nothing of the law and commandments of the Lord, but taught all Israel the ordinances and judgments.

[8] Now the commission, which was written from Artaxerxes the king, came to Esdras the priest and reader of the law of the Lord, whereof this that followeth is a copy; [9] King Artaxerxes unto Esdras the priest and reader of the law of the Lord, greeting: [10] Having determined to deal graciously, I have given order, that such of the nation of the Jews, and of the priests and Levites, § and of those within our realm, as are willing and desirous, should go with thee unto Jerusalem. [11] As many therefore as have a mind thereunto, let them depart with thee, as it hath seemed good both to me and my seven friends the counsellors; [12] that they may look unto the affairs of Judaea and Jerusalem, agreeably to that which is in the law of the Lord, [13] and carry the gifts unto the Lord of Israel to Jerusalem, which I and my friends have vowed; and that all the gold and silver that can be found in the country of Babylonia for the Lord in Jerusalem, [14] with that also which is given of the

[19] And I king Artaxerxes have also commanded the keepers of the treasures in Syria and Phoenicia, that whatsoever Esdras the priest and reader of the law of the Most High God shall send for, they should give it him with all diligence, [20] to the sum of a hundred talents of silver, likewise also of wheat even to a hundred [] measures, and a hundred firkins of wine, and [††] salt in abundance. [21] Let all things be performed after the law of God diligently unto the most high God, that wrath come not upon the kingdom of the king and his sons. [22] I command you also, that no tax, nor any other imposition, be laid upon any of the priests, or Levites, or holy singers, or porters, or temple servants, or any that have employment in this temple, and that no man have authority to impose anything upon them. [25] Then said Esdras the scribe, Blessed be the only Lord, the God of my fathers, who hath put these things into the heart of the king, to glorify his house that is in Jerusalem: [26] and hath honoured me in the sight of the king, and his counsellors, and all his friends and nobles. [27] Therefore was I encouraged by the help of the Lord my God, and gathered together out of Israel men to go up with me. [28] And these are the chief according to their families and the several divisions thereof, that went up with me from Babylon in the reign of king Artaxerxes: [29] of the sons of Phinees, Gerson: of the sons of Ithamar, Gamael: of the sons of David, [§§] Attus [] the son of Sechenias: [30] of the sons of Phoros, Zacharais; and with him were counted a hundred and fifty men: [31] of the sons of Phaath Moab, Eliaonias the son of [†††] Zaraias, and with him two hundred men: [32] [‡‡‡] of the sons of Zathoes, Sechenias the son of Jezelus, and with him [§§§] three hundred men: of the sons ofAdin, Obeth the son of Jonathan, and with him two hundred and fifty men: [33] of the sons of Elam, Jesias son of Athaliah. Gotholias, and with him seventy men: [34] of the sons of Saphatias, Zebadiah. Zaraias son of Michael, and with him threescore and ten men: [35] of the sons of Joab, Obadiah. Abadias son of Jehiel. Jezelus, and with him two hundred and twelve men: [36] [*] of the sons of Banias, Salimoth son of Josaphias, and with him a hundred and threescore men: [37] of the sons of Babi, Zacharias son of Bebai, and with him twenty and eight men: [38] of the sons of Azgad. Astath,

[41] And I gathered them together to the river called Theras; and there we pitched our tents three days, and I surveyed them. [42] But when I had found there none of the priests and Levites, [43] then sent I unto Eleazar, and Ariel Iduel, and Maasmas, [44] and Elnathan, and Samaias, and Jarib Joribus, Nathan, Ennatan, Zacharias, and Mosollamus, principal men and men of understanding. [45] And I bade them that they should go unto Iddo Loddeus the captain, who was in the place of Casiphia, the treasury: [46] and commanded them that they should speak unto Loddeus, and to his brethren, and to the treasurers in that place, to send us such men as might execute the priests' office in the house of our Lord. [47] And by the mighty hand of our Lord they brought unto us † men of understanding of the sons of ‡ Mooli the son of Levi, the son of Israel, § Asebebias, and his sons, and his brethren, who were eighteen, [48] and  Asebias, and Annuus, and Osaias his brother, of the sons of Chanuneus, and their sons were twenty men; [49] and of the temple-servants whom David and the principal men had appointed for the servants of the Levites, two hundred and twenty temple-servants, the catalogue of all their names was shewed. [50] And there I vowed a fast for the young men before our Lord, to desire of him a prosperous journey both for us and for our children and cattle that were with us: [51] for I was ashamed to ask of the king footmen, and horsemen, and conduct for safeguard against our adversaries. [52] For we had said unto the king, that the power of our Lord would be with them that seek him, to support them in all ways. [53] And again we besought our lord as touching these things, and found him favourable unto us. [54] Then I separated twelve men of the chiefs of the priests, †† Eserebias, and Assamias, and ten men of their brethren with them: [55] and I weighed them the silver, and the gold, and the holy vessels of the house of our Lord, which the king, and his counsellors, and the nobles, and all Israel, had given. [56] And when I had weighed it, I delivered unto them six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and silver vessels of a hundred talents, and a hundred talents of gold, [57] and twenty golden vessels, and twelve vessels of brass, even of fine brass, glittering like gold. [58] And I said unto them, Both ye are holy unto the Lord, ‡‡ and the vessels are holy, and the gold and the silver are a vow unto the Lord, the Lord of our fathers. [59] Watch ye, and keep them till ye deliver them to the chiefs of the priests and Levites, and to the principal men of the families of Israel, in Jerusalem, in the chambers of the house of our Lord. [60] So the priests and the Levites, who received the silver and the gold and the vessels which were in Jerusalem, brought them into the temple of the Lord.

[61] And from the river Theras we departed the twelfth day of the first month, until we came to Jerusalem, by the mighty hand of our Lord which was upon us: and the Lord delivered us from assault by the way, from every enemy, and so we came to Jerusalem. [62] And when we had been there three days, the silver and gold was weighed and delivered in the house of our Lord on the fourth day unto §§ Marmoth the priest the son of  Urias. Jesus and ††† Moeth the son of Sabannus, the Levites: all was delivered them by number and weight. [64] And all the weight of them was written up the same hour. [65] Moreover they that were come out of the captivity offered sacrifices unto the Lord, the God of Israel, even twelve bullocks for all Israel, fourscore and sixteen rams, [66] threescore and twelve lambs, goats for a peace offering, twelve; all of them a sacrifice to the Lord. [67] And they delivered the king's commandments unto the king's stewards, and to the governors of Coelesyria and Phoenicia; and they honored the people and the temple of the Lord.

[68] Now when these things were done, the principal men came unto me, and said, [69] The nation of Israel, and the princes, and the priests and the Levites, have not put away from them the strange people of the land, ‡‡‡ nor the uncleannesses of the Gentiles, to wit, of the Canaanites, Hittites, Pherezites, Jebusites, and the Moabites, Egyptians, and Edomites. [70] For both they and their sons have married with their daughters, and the holy seed is mixed with the strange people of the land; and from the beginning of this matter the rulers and the nobles have been partakers of this iniquity. [71] And as soon as I had heard these things, I rent my clothes, and my holy garment, and plucked the hair from off my head and beard, and sat me down sad and full of heaviness. [72] So all they that were moved at the word of the Lord, the God of Israel, assembled unto me, whilst I mourned for the iniquity: but I sat still full of heaviness until the evening sacrifice. [73] Then rising up from the fast with my clothes and my holy garment rent, and bowing my knees, and stretching forth my hands unto the Lord, [74] I said, O Lord, I am ashamed and confounded before thy face; [75] for our sins are multiplied above our heads, and our errors have reached up unto heaven, [76] ever since the time of our fathers; and we are in great sin, even unto this day. [77] And for our sins and our fathers' we with our brethren and our kings and our priests were given up to the kings of the earth, to the sword, and to captivity, and for a prey with shame, unto this day. [78] And now in some measure hath mercy been shewed unto us from thee, O Lord, that there should be left us a root and a name in the place of thy sanctuary; [79] and to discover unto us a light in the house of the Lord our God, and to give us food in the time of our servitude. [80] Yea, when we were in bondage, we were not forsaken of our Lord; but he made us gracious before the kings of Persia, so that they gave us food, [81] and glorified the temple of our Lord, and raised up the desolate Sion, to give us a sure abiding in Jewry and Jerusalem. [82] And now, O Lord, what shall we say, having these things? For we have transgressed thy commandments, which thou gavest by the hand of thy servants the prophets, saying, [83] That the land, which ye enter into to possess as a heritage, is a land polluted with the pollutions of the strangers of the land, and they have filled it with their uncleanness. [84] Therefore now shall ye not join your daughters unto their sons, neither shall ye take their daughters unto your sons. [85] Neither shall ye seek to have peace with them for ever, that ye may be strong, and eat the good things of the land, and that ye may leave it for an inheritance unto your children for evermore. [86] And all that is befallen is done unto us for our wicked works and great sins: for thou, O Lord, didst make our sins light, [87] and didst give unto us such a root: but we have turned back again to transgress thy law, in mingling ourselves with the uncleanness of the heathen of the land. [88] §§§ Thou wast not angry with us to destroy us, till thou hadst left us neither root, seed, nor name. [89] O Lord of Israel, thou art true: for we are left a root this day. [90] Behold, now are we before thee in our iniquities, for we cannot stand any longer before thee by reason of these things.

[91] ✡ And as Esdras in his prayer made his confession, weeping, and lying flat upon the ground before the temple, there gathered unto him from Jerusalem a very great throng of men and women and children: for there was great weeping among the multitude. [92] Then Jechonias the son of Jeelus, one of the sons of Israel, called out, and said, O Esdras, we have sinned against the Lord God, we have married strange women of the heathen of the land, and now is all Israel * aloft. [93] Let us make an oath unto the Lord herein, that we will put away all our wives, which we have taken of the strangers, with their children, [94] like as seemeth good unto thee, and to as many as do obey the Law of the Lord. [95] Arise, and put in execution: for to thee doth this matter appertain, and we will be with thee to do valiantly. [96] So Esdras arose, and took an oath of the chief of the priests and Levites of all Israel to do after these things; and so they sware.

[1] ✡ Then Esdras rising from the court of the temple went to the chamber of Jonas the son of Eliasib, [2] and lodged there, and did eat no bread nor drink water, mourning for the great iniquities of the multitude. [3] And there was made proclamation in all Jewry and Jerusalem to all them that were of the captivity, that they should be gathered together at Jerusalem: [4] and that whosoever met not there within two or three days, according as the elders that bare rule appointed, their cattle should be seized to the use of the temple, and himself cast out from the multitude of them that were of the captivity.

[5] And in three days were all they of the tribe of Judah and Benjamin gathered together at Jerusalem: this was the ninth month, on the twentieth day of the month. [6] And all the multitude sat together trembling in the broad place before the temple because of the present foul weather. [7] So Esdras arose up and said unto them, ye have transgressed the law and married strange wives, thereby to increase the sins of Israel. [8] And now make confession and give glory unto the Lord, the God of our fathers, [9] and do his will, and separate yourselves from the heathen of the land, and from the strange women. [10] Then cried the whole multitude, and said with a loud voice, Like as thou hast spoken, so will we do. [11] But forasmuch as the multitude is great, and it is foul weather, so that we cannot stand without, and this is not a work of one day or two, seeing our sin in these things is spread far: [12] therefore let the rulers of the multitude stay, and let all them of our habitations that have strange wives come at the time appointed, [13] and with them the rulers and judges of every place, till we turn away the wrath of the Lord from us for this matter. [14] Then Jonathan the son of Azael and * Ezekias the son of Thocanus accordingly took the matter upon them: and Mosollamus and Levis and Sabbateus were assessors to them. [15] And they that were of the captivity did according to all these things.

[16] And Esdras the priest chose unto him principal men of their families, all by name: and on the new moon of the tenth month they were shut in together to examine the matter. [17] So their cause that held strange wives was brought to an end by the new moon of the first month. [18] And of the priests

PRAYER OF MANASSES
KING OF JUDAH,
WHEN HE WAS HOLDEN CAPTIVE IN BABYLON.

[1] O LORD Almighty, that art in heaven, thou God of our fathers, of Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and of their righteous seed; [2] who hast made heaven and earth, with all the [*] ornament thereof; [3] who hast bound the sea by the word of thy commandment; who hast shut up the deep, and sealed it by thy terrible and glorious name; [4] whom all things fear, yea, tremble before thy power; [5] for the majesty of thy glory cannot be borne, and the anger of thy threatening toward sinners is importable: [6] thy merciful promise is unmeasurable and unsearchable; [7] for thou art the Lord Most High, of great compassion, longsuffering and abundant in mercy, and repentest [†] of bringing evils upon men. [8] [‡]Thou, O Lord, according to thy great goodness hast promised repentance and forgiveness to them that have sinned against thee: and of thine infinite mercies hast appointed repentance unto sinners, that they may be saved. Thou therefore, O Lord, that art the God of the just, hast not appointed repentance to the just, to Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, which have not sinned against thee; but thou hast appointed repentance unto me that am a sinner: [9] for I have sinned above the number of the sands of the sea. My transgressions are multiplied, [§] O Lord: my transgressions are multiplied, and I am not worthy to behold and see the height of heaven for the multitude of mine iniquities. [10] I am bowed down with many iron bands, that I cannot lift up mine head []by reason of my sins, neither have I any respite: for I have provoked thy wrath, and done that which is evil before thee: [††]I did not thy will, neither kept I thy commandments: I have set up abominations, and have multiplied [‡‡]detestable things. [11] Now therefore I bow the knee of mine heart, beseeching thee of grace. [12] I have sinned, O Lord, I have sinned, and I acknowledge mine iniquities: [13] but, I humbly beseech thee, forgive me, O Lord, forgive me, and destroy me not with mine iniquities. Be not angry with me for ever, by reserving evil for me; neither condemn me into the lower parts of the earth. For thou, [§§] O Lord, art the God of them that repent; [14] and in me thou wilt shew all thy goodness: for thou wilt save me, that am unworthy, according to thy great mercy. [15] And I will praise thee for ever all the days of my life: for all the host of heaven doth sing thy praise, and thine is the glory for ever and ever. Amen.

2 ESDRAS.

[1] THE second book of the prophet Esdras, the son of Saraias, the son of Azaraias, the son of Helkias, the son of Salemas, the son of Sadoc, the son of Ahitob, [2] the son of Achias, the son of Phinees, the son of Heli, the son of Amarias, the son of Aziei, the son of Marimoth, the son of Arna, the son of Ozias, the son of Borith, the son of Abissei, the son of Phinees, the son of Eleazar, [3] the son of Aaron, of the tribe of Levi; which was captive in the land of the Medes, in the reign of Artaxerxes king of the Persians.

[4] And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, [5] Go thy way, and shew my people their sinful deeds, and their children their wickedness which they have done against me; that they may tell their children's children: [6] because the sins of their fathers are increased in them: for they have forgotten me, and have done sacrifice unto strange gods. [7] Did I not bring them out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage? but they have provoked me unto wrath, and have despised my counsels. [8] Shake thou then the hair of thy head, and cast all evils upon them, for they have not been obedient unto my law, but it is a rebellious people. [9] How long shall I forbear them, unto whom I have done so much good? [10] Many kings have I overthrown for their sakes; Pharoah with his servants and all his host have I smitten down. [11] All the nations have I destroyed before them, and in the east I have scattered the people of two provinces, even of Tyre and Sidon, and have slain all their adversaries. [12] Speak thou therefore unto them, saying,

[13] Thus saith the Lord, of a truth I brought you through the sea, and where there was no path I made for you highways; I gave you Moses for a leader, and Aaron for a priest. [14] I gave you light in a pillar of fire, and great wonders have I done among you; yet have ye forgotten me, saith the Lord.

[15] Thus saith the Lord Almighty, The quails were for a token to you; I gave you a camp for your safeguard, nevertheless ye murmured there: [16] and ye triumphed not in my name for the destruction of your enemies, but ever to this day do ye yet murmur. [17] Where are the benefits that I have done for you? when ye were hungry and thirsty in the wilderness, did ye not cry unto me, [18] saying, Why hast thou brought us into this wilderness to kill us? it had been better for us to have served the Egyptians, than to die in this wilderness. [19] I had pity upon your mournings, and gave you manna for food; ye did eat angels' bread. [20] When ye were thirsty, did I not cleave the rock, and waters flowed out to your fill? for the heat I covered you with the leaves of the trees. [21] I divided among you fruitful lands; I cast out the Canaanites, the Pherezites, and the Philistines, before you: what shall I yet do more for you? saith the Lord.

[22] Thus saith the Lord Almighty, When ye were in the wilderness, at the bitter river, being athirst, and blaspheming my name, [23] I gave you not fire for your blasphemies, but cast a tree in the water, and made the river sweet. [24] What shall I do unto thee, O Jacob? thou, Judah, wouldest not obey me: I will turn me to other nations, and unto them will I give my name, that they may keep my statutes. [25] Seeing ye have forsaken me, I also will forsake you; when ye ask me to be merciful unto you, I will have no mercy upon you. [26] Whensoever ye shall call upon me, I will not hear you: for ye have defiled your hands with blood, and your feet are swift to commit manslaughter. [27] Ye have not as it were forsaken me, but your own selves, saith the Lord.

[28] Thus saith the Lord Almighty, Have I not prayed you as a father his sons, as a mother her daughters, and a nurse her young babes, [29] that ye would be my people, and I should be your God; that ye would be my children, and I should be your father? [30] I gathered you together, as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings: but now, what shall I do unto you? I will cast you out from my presence. [31] When ye offer oblations unto me, I will turn my face from you: for your solemn feast days, your new moons, and your circumcisions of the flesh, have I rejected. [32] I sent unto you my servants the prophets, whom ye have taken and slain, and torn their bodies in pieces, whose blood I will require of your hands, saith the Lord.

[33] Thus saith the Lord Almighty, Your house is desolate, I will cast you out as the wind doth stubble. [34] And your children shall not be fruitful; for they have neglected my commandment * unto you, and done that which is evil before me. [35] Your houses will I give to a people that shall come; which not having heard of me yet believe me; they to whom I have shewed no signs shall do that which I have commanded. [36] They have seen no prophets, yet they shall call their former estate to remembrance. [37] I take to witness the grace of the people that shall come, whose little ones rejoice with gladness: and though they see me not with bodily eyes, yet in spirit they shall believe the thing that I say.

[38] And now, O father, behold with glory; and see the people that come from the east: [39] unto whom I will give for leaders, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, Oseas, Amos, and Micheas, Joel, Abdias, and Jonas, [40] Nahum, and Abacuc, Sophonias, Aggaeus, Zachary, and Malachy, which is called also the angel of the Lord.

[1] Thus saith the Lord, I brought this people out of bondage, and I gave them my commandments by my servants the prophets; whom they would not hear, but set my counsels at nought. [2] The mother that bare them saith unto them, go your way, O my children; for I am a widow and forsaken. [3] I brought you up with gladness, and with sorrow and heaviness have I lost you: for ye have sinned before the Lord God, and done that which is evil before me. [4] But what shall I now do unto you? for I am a widow and forsaken: go your way, O my children, and ask mercy of the Lord. [5] As for me, O father, I call upon thee for a witness over the mother of these children, because they would not keep my covenant, [6] that thou bring them to confusion, and their mother to a spoil, that there may be no offspring of them. [7] Let them be scattered abroad among the heathen, let their names be blotted out of the earth: for they have despised my covenant. [8] Woe unto thee, Assur, thou that hidest the unrighteous with thee! O thou wicked nation, remember what I did unto Sodom and Gomorrah; [9] whose land lieth in clods of pitch and heaps of ashes: even so also will I do unto them that have not hearkened unto me, saith the Lord Almighty.

[10] Thus saith the Lord unto Esdras, Tell my people that I will give them the kingdom of Jerusalem, which I would have given unto Israel. [11] Their glory also will I take unto me, and give these the everlasting tabernacles, which I had prepared for them. [12] They shall have the tree of life for an ointment of sweet savour; they shall neither labour, nor be weary. [13] * Ask, and ye shall receive: pray for few days unto you, that they may be shortened: the kingdom is already prepared for you: watch. [14] Take heaven and earth to witness, take them to witness; for I have given up the evil, and created the good: for I live, saith the Lord.

[15] Mother, embrace thy children; I will bring them out with gladness like a dove; stablish their feet; for I have chosen thee, saith the Lord. [16] And those that be dead will I raise up again from their places, and bring them out from their tombs: for I [†] have known my name in them. [17] Fear not, thou mother of the children: for I have chosen thee, saith the Lord. [18] For thy help will I send my servants Esaias and Jeremy, after whose counsel I have sanctified and prepared for thee twelve trees laden with divers fruits, [19] and as many fountains flowing with milk and honey, and seven mighty mountains, whereupon there grow roses and lilies, whereby I will fill thy children with joy. [20] Do right to the widow, judge the fatherless, give to the poor, defend the orphan, clothe the naked, [21] heal the broken and the weak, laugh not a lame man to scorn, defend the maimed, and let the blind man come unto the sight of my glory. [22] Keep the old and young within thy walls. [23] Wheresoever thou findest the dead, set a sign upon them and commit them to the grave, and I will give thee the first place in my resurrection. [24] Abide still, O my people, and take thy rest, for thy quietness shall come. [25] Nourish thy children, O thou good nurse, and stablish their feet. [26] As for the servants whom I have given thee, there shall not one of them perish; for I will require them from among thy number. [27] Be not careful overmuch: for when the day of tribulation and anguish cometh, others shall weep and be sorrowful, but thou shalt be merry and have abundance. [28] The nations shall envy thee, but they shall be able to do nothing against thee, saith the Lord. [29] My hands shall cover thee, so that thy children see not [‡] hell. [30] Be joyful, O thou mother, with thy children; for I will deliver thee, saith the Lord. [31] Remember thy children that sleep, for I shall bring them out of the secret places of the earth, and shew mercy unto them: for I am merciful, saith the Lord Almighty. [32] Embrace thy children until I come, and proclaim mercy unto them: for my wells run over, and my grace shall not fail.

[33] I Esdras received a charge from the Lord upon the mount Horeb, that I should go unto Israel; but when I came unto them, they would none of me, and rejected the commandment of the Lord. [34] And therefore I say unto you, O ye nations, that hear and understand, look for your shepherd, he shall give you everlasting rest; for he is nigh at hand, that shall come in the end of the world. [35] Be ready to the rewards of the kingdom, for the everlasting light shall shine upon you for evermore. [36] Flee the shadow of this world, receive the joyfulness of your glory: I call to witness my saviour openly. [37] O receive that which is given you of the Lord, and be joyful, giving thanks unto him that hath called you to heavenly kingdoms. [38] Arise up and stand, and behold the number of those that be sealed in the feast of the Lord; [39] they that withdrew them from the shadow of the world have received glorious garments of the Lord. [40] [§] Look upon thy number, O Sion, and make up the reckoning of those of thine that are clothed in white, which have fulfilled the law of the Lord. [41] The number of thy children, whom thou longest for, is fulfilled: beseech the power of the Lord, that thy people, which have been called from the beginning, may be hallowed.

[42] I Esdras saw upon the mount Sion a great multitude, whom I could not number, and they all praised the Lord with songs. [43] And in the midst of them there was a young man of a high stature, taller than all the rest, and upon every one of their heads he set crowns, and was more exalted; whereat I marvelled greatly. [44] So I asked the angel, and said, What are these, my Lord? [45] He answered and said unto me, These be they that have put off the mortal clothing, and put on the immortal, and have confessed the name of God: now are they crowned, and receive palms. [46] Then said I unto the angel, What young man is he that setteth crowns upon them, and giveth them palms in their hands? [47] So he answered and said unto me, It is the Son of God, whom they have confessed in the world. Then began I greatly to commend them that stood so stiffly for the name of the Lord. [48] Then the angel said unto me, Go thy way, and tell my people what manner of things, and how great wonders of the Lord God thou hast seen.

[1] In the thirtieth year after the ruin of the city, I Salathiel (the same is Esdras) was in Babylon, and lay troubled upon my bed, and my thoughts came up over my heart: [2] for I saw the desolation of Sion, and the wealth of them that dwelt at Babylon. [3] And my spirit was sore moved, so that I began to speak words full of fear to the Most High, and said, [4] O Lord that bearest rule, didst thou not not speak at the beginning, when thou didst fashion the earth, and that thyself alone, and commandest the [*] dust. [5] and it [†] gave thee Adam, a body without a soul? yet it was the workmanship of thine hands, and thou didst breathe into him the breath of life, and he was made living before thee. [6] And thou leddest him into paradise, which thy right hand did plant, before ever the earth came forward. [7] And unto him thou gavest thy one commandment: which he transgressed, and immediately thou appointedst death for him and in his generations; and there were born of him nations and tribes, peoples and kindreds, out of number. [8] And every nation walked after their own will, and did ungodly things before thee, and despised thy commandments, and thou didst not forbid them. [9] Nevertheless again in process of time thou broughtest the flood upon those that dwelt in the world, and destroyedst them. [10] And it came to pass that the same hap befell them; like as death was to Adam, so was the flood to these. [11] Nevertheless one of them thou leftest, Noah with his household, even all the righteous men that came of him. [12] And it came to pass, that when they that dwelt upon the earth began to multiply, they multiplied also children, and peoples, and many nations, and began again to be more ungodly than the first. [13] And it came to pass, when they did wickedly before thee, thou didst choose thee one from among them, whose name was Abraham; [14] and him thou lovedst, and unto him only thou shewedst the end of the times secretly by night: [15] and madest an everlasting covenant with him, promising him that thou wouldest never forsake his seed. [16] And unto him thou gavest Isaac, and unto Isaac thou gavest Jacob and Esau. And thou didst set apart Jacob for thyself, but didst put by Esau: and Jacob became a great multitude. [17] And it came to pass, that when thou leddest his seed out of Egypt, thou broughtest them up to the mount Sinai. [18] Thou bowedst the heavens also, and didst [‡] shake the earth, and movedst the whole world, and madest the depths to tremble, and troubledst the course of that age. [19] And thy glory went through four gates, of fire, and of earthquake, and of wind, and of cold; that thou mightest give the law unto the seed of Jacob, and the commandment unto the generation of Israel. [20] And yet tookest thou not away from them their [§] wicked heart, that thy law might bring forth fruit in them. [21] For the first Adam bearing a [] wicked heart transgressed, and was overcome; and not he only, but all they also that are born of him. [22] Thus disease was made permanent; and the law was in the heart of the people along with the [††] wickedness of the root; so the good departed away, and that which was [‡‡] wicked abode still. [23] So the times passed away, and the years were brought to an end: then didst thou raise thee up a servant, called David, [24] whom thou commandedest to build a city unto thy name, and to offer oblations unto thee therein of thine own. [25] When this was done many years, then they that inhabited the city did evil, [26] in all things doing even as Adam and all his generations had done: for they also bare a [§§] wicked heart: [27] and so thou gavest thy city over into the hands of thine enemies. [28] And I said then in mine heart, are their deeds any better that inhabit Babylon? and hath she therefore dominion over Sion? [29] For it came to pass when I came hither, that I saw also impieties without number, and my soul saw many evil-doers in this thirtieth year, so that my heart failed me. [30] For I have seen how thou sufferest them sinning, and hast spared the ungodly doers, and hast destroyed thy people, and hast preserved thine enemies; and thou hast not signified [31] unto any [] how thy way may be comprehended. Are the deeds of Babylon better than those of Sion? [32] Or is there any other nation that knoweth thee beside Israel? or what tribes have so believed thy covenants as these tribes of Jacob? [33] And yet their reward appeareth not, and their labour hath no fruit: for I have gone hither and thither through the nations, and I see that they abound in wealth, and think not upon thy commandments. [34] Weigh thou therefore our iniquities now in the balance, and theirs also that dwell in the world; and so shall it be found which way the scale inclineth. [35] Or when was it that they which dwell upon the earth have not sinned in thy sight? or what nation hath so kept thy commandments? [36] Thou shalt find that men who may be reckoned by name have kept thy precepts; but nations thou shalt not find.

[1] And the angel that was sent unto me, whose name was Uriel, gave me an answer, [2] and said to me, thy heart hath utterly failed thee in regarding this world, and thinkest thou to comprehend the way of the Most High?

[3] Then said I, Yea my Lord.

And he answered me, and said, I am sent to shew thee three ways, and to set forth three similitudes before thee: [4] whereof if thou canst declare me one, I also will shew thee the way that thou desirest to see, and I will teach thee wherefore the heart is [*] wicked.

[5] And I said, say on, my Lord.

Then said he unto me, Go to, weigh me a weight of fire, or measure me a [†] measure of wind, or call me again the day that is past.

[6] Then answered I and said, who of the sons of men is able to do this, that thou shouldest ask me of such things?

[7] And he said unto me, If I had asked thee, saying, How many dwellings are there in the heart of the sea? or how many springs are there at the fountain head of the deep? or how many ‡ ways are above the firmament? or which are the outgoings § of hell? or which are the paths of paradise? [8] peradventure thou wouldest say unto me, I never went down into the deep, nor as yet into hell, neither did I ever climb up into heaven. [9] Nevertheless now have I asked thee but only of the fire and wind, and of the day, things wherethrough thou hast passed, and  without which thou canst not be, and yet hast thou given me no answer of them.

[10] He said moreover unto me, Thine own things, that are grown up with thee, canst thou not know; [11] how then can thy vessel comprehend the way of the Most High? and how can he that is already worn out with the corrupted world understand †† incorruption?

[12] ‡‡ And when I heard these things I fell upon my face, and said unto him, It were better that we were not here at all, than that we should come hither and live in the midst of ungodliness, and suffer, and not know wherefore.

[13] He answered me, and said, §§ The woods of the trees of the field went forth, and took counsel together, [14] and said, Come, let us go and make war against the sea, that it may depart away before us, and that we may make us more woods. [15] The waves of the sea also in like manner took counsel together, and said, Come, let us go up and subdue the wood of the plain, that there also we may make us another country. [16] The counsel of the wood was in vain, for the fire came and consumed it: [17] likewise also the counsel of the waves of the sea, for the sand stood up and stopped them. [18] If thou wert judge now betwixt these two, whom wouldest thou justify, or whom condemn?

[19] I answered and said, it is a foolish counsel that they both have taken, for the ground is given unto the wood, and the place of the sea is given to bear his waves.

[20] Then answered he me, and said, Thou hast given a right judgement, and why judgest thou not in thine own case? [21] For like as the ground is given unto the wood, and the sea to his waves, even so they that dwell upon the earth may understand nothing but that which is upon the earth: and he only that dwelleth above the heavens may understand the things that are above the height of the heavens.

[22] Then answered I and said, I beseech thee, O Lord,  wherefore is the power of understanding given unto me? [23] For it was not in my mind to be curious of the ways above, but of such things as pass by us daily; because Israel is given up as a reproach to the heathen, and the people whom thou hast loved is given over unto ungodly nations, and the law of our forefathers is made of none effect, and the written covenants are nowhere regarded, [24] and we pass away out of the world as grasshoppers, and our life is as a ††† vapour, neither are we worthy to obtain mercy. [25] What will he then do for his name whereby we are called? Of these things have I asked.

[26] Then he answered me, and said, if thou be alive thou shalt see, and if thou livest ‡‡‡ long, thou shalt marvel; for the world hasteth fast to pass away.

[27] For it is not able to bear the things that are promised to the righteous in the times to come: for this world is full of sadness and infirmities. [28] For the evil whereof thou askest me is sown, but the gathering thereof is not yet come. [29] If therefore that which is sown be not reaped, and if the place where the evil is sown pass not away, there cannot come the field where the good is sown. [30] For a grain of evil seed was sown in the heart of Adam from the beginning, and how much wickedness hath it brought forth unto this time! and how much shall it yet bring forth until the §§§ time of threshing come! [31] Ponder now by thyself, how great fruit of wickedness a grain of evil seed hath brought forth. [32] When the ears which are without number shall be sown, how great a floor shall they fill!

[33] Then I answered and said, * How long? and when shall these things come to pass? wherefore are our years few and evil?

[34] And he answered me, and said, Thou dost not hasten more than the Most High: for thy haste is † for thine own self, but he that is above hasteneth on behalf of many. [35] Did not the souls of the righteous ask question of these things in their chambers, saying, How long ‡ are we here? when cometh the fruit of the § threshing time of our reward? [36] And unto them Jeremiel the archangel gave answer, and said, Even when the number is fulfilled of them that are like unto you. For he hath weighed the world in the balance; [37] and by measure hath he measured the times, and by number hath he numbered the seasons; and he shall not  move nor stir them, until the said measure be fulfilled.

[38] Then answered I and said, O Lord that bearest rule, yet even we all are full of impiety: [39] and for our sakes peradventure it is that the †† threshing time of the righteous is kept back, because of the sins of them that dwell upon the earth. [40] So he answered me, and said, Go thy way to a woman with child, and ask of her when she hath fulfilled her nine months, if her womb may keep the birth any longer within her.

[41] Then said I, no, Lord, that can it not.

And he said unto me, in the grave the chambers of souls are like the womb: [42] for like as a woman that travaileth maketh haste to escape the anguish of the travail: even so do these places haste to deliver those things that are committed unto them from the beginning. [43] Then shall it be shewed thee concerning those things which thou desirest to see.

[44] Then answered I and said, if I have found favour in thy sight, and if it be possible, and if I be meet therefore, [45] shew me this also, whether there be more to come than is past, or whether the more part is gone over us. [46] For what is gone I know, but what is for to come I know not.

[47] And he said unto me, Stand up upon the right side, and I shall expound the similitude unto thee.

[48] so I stood, and saw, and, behold, a hot burning oven passed by before me: and it happened, that when the flame was gone by I looked, and, behold, the smoke remained still. [49] After this there passed by before me a watery cloud, and sent down much rain with a storm; and when the stormy rain was past, the drops remained therein still.

[50] Then said he unto me, Consider with thyself; as the rain is more than the drops, and the fire is greater than the smoke, so the quantity which is past did more exceed; but the drops and the smoke remained still.

[51] Then I prayed, and said, May I live, thinkest thou, until that time? or who shall be in those days?

[52] He answered me, and said, As for the tokens whereof thou askest me, I may tell thee of them in part: but as touching thy life, I am not sent to shew thee; for I do not know it.

[1] Nevertheless as concerning the tokens, behold, the days shall come, that they which dwell upon earth shall be taken [*] with great amazement, and the way of truth shall be hidden, and the land shall be barren of faith. [2] But iniquity shall be increased above that which now thou seest, or that thou hast heard long ago. [3] And the land, that thou seest now to have rule, shall be waste and [†] untrodden, and men shall see it desolate. [4] But if the Most High grant thee to live, thou shalt see that which is after the third kingdom to be troubled; and the sun shall suddenly shine forth in the night, and the moon in the day: [5] and blood shall drop out of wood, and the stone shall give his voice, and the peoples shall be troubled; and [‡] their goings shall be changed: [6] and he shall rule, whom they that dwell upon the earth look not for, and the fowls shall take their flight away together: [7] and the Sodomitish sea shall cast out fish, and make a noise in the night, which many have not known: but all shall hear the voice thereof. [8] There shall be chaos also in many places, and the fire shall be oft sent out, and the wild beasts shall change their places, and women shall bring forth monsters: [9] and salt waters shall be found in the sweet, and all friends shall destroy one another; then shall wit hide itself, and understanding withdraw itself into its chamber; [10] and it shall be sought of many, and shall not be found: and unrighteousness and incontinency shall be multiplied upon earth. [11] One land also shall ask another, and say, Is righteousness, is a man that doeth righteousness, gone through thee? And it shall say, No. [12] And it shall come to pass at that time that men shall hope, but shall not obtain: they shall labour, but their ways shall not prosper. [13] To shew thee such tokens I have leave; and if thou wilt pray again, and weep as now, and fast seven days, thou shalt hear yet greater things than these.

[14] Then I awaked, and an extreme trembling went through my body, and my mind was troubled, so that it fainted. [15] So the angel that was come to talk with me held me, comforted me, and set me up upon my feet. [16] And in the second night it came to pass, that [§] Phaltiel the captain of the people came unto me, saying, Where hast thou been? and why is thy countenance sad? [17] or knowest thou not that Israel is committed unto thee in the land of their captivity? [18] Up then, and eat some bread, and forsake us not, as the shepherd that leaveth in the hands of cruel wolves. [19] Then said I unto him, Go thy ways from me, and come not nigh me for seven days, and then shalt thou come unto me. And he heard what I said, and went from me.

[20] And so I fasted seven days, mourning and weeping, like as Uriel the angel commanded me. [21] And after seven days, so it was, that the thoughts of my heart were very grievous unto me again, [22] and my soul recovered the spirit of understanding, and I began to speak words before the Most High again,

[23] and said, O Lord that bearest rule, of all the woods of the earth, and of all the trees thereof, thou hast chosen thee one vine: [24] and of all the lands of the world thou hast chosen thee one  country: and of all the flowers of the world thou hast chosen thee one lily: [25] and of all the depths of the sea thou hast filled thee one river: and of all builded cities thou hast hallowed Sion unto thyself: [26] and of all the fowls that are created thou hast named thee one dove: and of all the cattle that are made thou hast provided thee one sheep: [27] and among all the multitudes of peoples thou hast gotten thee one people: and unto this people, whom thou lovedst, thou gavest a law that is approved of all. [28] And now, O Lord, why hast thou given this one people over unto many, and †† hast dishonoured the one root above others, and hast scattered thine only one among many? [29] And they which did gainsay thy promises have trodden them down that believed thy covenants. [30] If thou dost so much hate thy people, they should be punished with thine own hands.

[31] Now when I had spoken these words, the angel that came to me the night afore was sent unto me, [32] and said unto me, Hear me, and I will instruct thee; hearken unto me, and I shall tell thee more.

[33] And I said, Speak on, my Lord. Then said he unto me, Thou art sore troubled in mind for Israel's sake: lovest thou that people better than he that made them?

[34] And I said, No, Lord: but of very grief have I spoken: for my reins torment me every hour, while I labour to comprehend the way of the Most High, and to seek out part of his judgement.

[35] And he said unto me, Thou canst not. And I said, Wherefore, Lord, or whereunto was I born? or why was not my mother's womb then my grave, that I might not have seen the travail of Jacob, and the wearisome toil of the stock of Israel?

[36] And he said unto me, Number me them that are not yet come, gather me together the drops that are scattered abroad, make me the flowers green again that are withered, [37] open me the chambers that are closed, and bring me forth the winds that in them are shut up, or shew me the image of a voice: and then I will declare to thee the travail that thou askest to see.

[38] And I said, O Lord that bearest rule, who may know these things, but he that hath not his dwelling with men? [39] As for me, I am unwise: how may I then speak of these things whereof thou askest me?

[40] Then said he unto me, Like as thou canst do none of these things that I have spoken of, even so canst thou not find out my judgement, or the end of the love that I have promised unto my people.

[41] And I said, But, lo, O Lord, thou hast made the promise unto them that be in the end: and what shall they do that have been before us, or we that be now, or they that shall come after us?

[42] And he said unto me, I will liken my judgement unto a ring: like as there is no slackness of them that be last, even so there is no swiftness of them that be first.

[43] So I answered and said, Couldest thou not make them to be at once that have been made, and that be now, and that are for to come; that thou mightest shew thy judgment the sooner?

[44] Then answered he me, and said, The creature may not haste above the creator; neither may the world hold them at once that shall be created therein.

[46] And he said unto me, Ask the womb of a woman, and say unto her, If thou bringest forth ten children, why doest thou it at several times? pray her therefore to bring forth ten children at once.

[47] And I said, she cannot: but must do it by distance of time.

[48] Then said he unto me, Even so have I given the womb of the earth to those that be sown therein in their several times. [49] For like as a young child may not bring forth, neither she that is grown old bring forth any more, even so have I disposed the world which I created.

[50] And I asked, and said, Seeing thou hast now shewed me the way, I will speak before thee: Is our mother, of whom thou hast told me, still young? or doth she now draw nigh unto age?

[51] He answered me, and said, Ask a woman that beareth children, and she shall tell thee. [52] Say unto her, wherefore are not they whom thou hast now brought forth like those that were before, but less of stature? [53] And she also shall answer thee, They that be born in the strength of youth are of one fashion, and they that are born in the time of age, when the womb faileth, are otherwise. [54] Consider therefore thou also, how that ye are less of stature than those that were before you. [55] And so are they that come after you less than ye, as born of the creature which now beginneth to be old, and is past the strength of youth.

[56] Then said I, Lord, I beseech thee, if I have found favor in thy sight, shew thy servant by whom thou visitest thy creature.

[1] And he said unto me, In the beginning, when the earth was made, before the outgoings of the world were fixed, or ever the gatherings of the winds blew, [2] before the voices of the thunder sounded and before the flashes of the lightning shone, or ever the foundations of paradise were laid, [3] before the fair flowers were seen, or ever the powers of the earthquake were established, before the innumerable hosts of angels were gathered together, [4] or ever the heights of the air were lifted up, before the measures of the firmament were named, or ever the footstool of Sion [*] was established, [5] and ere the present years were sought out, and or ever the imaginations of them that now sin were estranged, before they were sealed that have gathered faith for a treasure: [6] then did I consider these things, and they all were made through me alone, and through none other: as by me also they shall be ended, and by none other.

[7] Then answered I and said, what shall be the parting asunder of the times? or when shall be the end of the first, and the beginning of it that followeth?

[8] And he said unto me, From [†] Abraham unto [‡] Abraham, inasmuch as Jacob and Esau were born of him, for Jacob's hand held the heel of Esau from the beginning. [9] For Esau is the end of this world, and Jacob is the beginning of it that followeth. [10] [§] The beginning of a man is his hand, and the end of a man is his heel; between the heel and the hand seek thou nought else, Esdras.

[11] I answered then and said, O Lord that bearest rule, If I have found favour in thy sight, [12] I beseech thee, shew thy servant the end of thy tokens, whereof thou shewedst me part the last night.

[13] So he answered and said unto me, Stand up upon thy feet, and thou shalt hear a mighty sounding voice; [14] and if the place whereon thou standest be greatly moved, [15] when it speaketh be thou not afraid: for the word is of the end, and the foundations of the earth shall understand, [16] that the speech is of them: they shall tremble and be moved: for they know that their end must be changed.

[17] And it happened, that when I had heard it I stood up upon my feet, and hearkened, and, behold, there was a voice that spake, and the sound of it was like the sound of many waters. [18] And it said, Behold, the days come, and it shall be that when I draw nigh to visit them that dwell upon the earth, [19] and when I shall make inquisition of them that have done hurt unjustly with their unrighteousness, and when the affliction of Sion shall be fulfilled, [20] and when the seal shall be set upon the world that is to pass away, then will I shew these tokens: the books shall be opened before the firmament, and all shall see together: [21] and the children of a year old shall speak with their voices, the women with child shall bring forth untimely children at three or four months, and they shall live, and dance. [22] And suddenly shall the sown places appear unsown, the full storehouses shall suddenly be found empty: [23] and the trumpet shall give a sound, which when every man heareth, they shall be suddenly afraid. [24] At that time shall friends make war one against another like enemies, and the earth shall stand in fear with those that dwell therein, the springs of the fountains shall stand still, so that for three hours they shall not run. [25] And it shall be that whosoever remaineth after all these things that I have told thee of, he shall be saved, and shall see my salvation, and the end of my world. [26] And they shall see the men that have been taken up, who have not tasted death from their birth: and the heart of the inhabitants shall be changed, and turned into another meaning. [27] For evil shall be blotted out, and deceit shall be quenched; [28] and faith shall flourish, and corruption shall be overcome, and the truth, which hath been so long without fruit, shall be declared.

[29] And when he talked with me, behold, by little and little the place whereon I stood  rocked to and fro. [30] And he said unto me, These things came I to shew thee †† this night. [31] If therefore thou wilt pray yet again, and fast seven days more, I shall yet ‡‡ tell thee greater things than these. [32] For thy voice hath surely been heard before the Most High: for the Mighty hath seen thy righteous dealing, he hath seen aforetime also thy chastity, which thou hast had ever since thy youth. [33] And therefore hath he sent me to shew thee all these things, and to say unto thee, Be of good comfort, and fear not. [34] And be not hasty in regard of the former times, to think vain things, that thou mayest not hasten in the latter times.

[35] And it came to pass after this, that I wept again, and fasted seven days in like manner, that I might fulfil the three weeks which he told me. [36] And in the eighth night was my heart vexed within me again, and I began to speak before the Most High. [37] For my spirit was greatly set on fire, and my soul was in distress. [38] And I said, O Lord, of a truth thou spakest at the beginning of the creation, upon the first day, and saidst thus; Let heaven and earth be made; and thy word perfected the work. [39] And then was the spirit hovering, and darkness and silence were on every side; the sound of man's voice was not yet. §§ [40] Then commandest thou a ray of light to be brought forth of thy treasures, that then thy works might appear. [41] Upon the second day again thou madest the spirit of the firmament and commandedst it to part asunder, and to make a division betwixt the waters, that the one part might go up, and the other remain beneath. [42] Upon the third day thou didst command that the waters should be gathered together in the seventh part of the earth: six parts didst thou dry up, and keep them, to the intent that of these some being both planted and tilled might serve before thee. [43] For as soom as thy word went forth the work was done. [44] For immediately there came forth great and innumerable fruit, and manifold pleasures for the taste, and flowers of inimitable colour, and odours of most exquisite smell: and this was done the third day. [45] Upon the fourth day thou commandedst that the sun should shine, and the moon give her light, and the stars should be in their order: [46] and gavest them a charge to do service unto man, that was to be made. [47] Upon the fifth day thou saidst unto the seventh part, where the water was gathered together, that it should bring forth living creatures, fowls and fishes: and so it came to pass, [48] that the dumb water and without life brought forth living things as it was bidden, that the peoples might therefore praise thy wondrous works. [49] Then didst thou preserve two living creatures, the one thou calledst Behemoth, and the other thou calledst Leviathan: [50] and thou didst separate the one from the other: for the seventh part, namely, where the water was gathered together, might not hold them both. [51] Unto Behemoth thou gavest one part, which was dried up on the third day, that he should dwell in the same, wherein are a thousand hills: [52] but unto Leviathan thou gavest the seventh part, namely, the moist; and thou hast kept them to be devoured of whom thou wilt, and when. [53] But upon the sixth day thou gavest commandment unto the earth, that it should bring forth before thee cattle, beasts, and creeping things: [54] and over these Adam, whom thou ordainest lord over all the works that thou hast made: of him come we all, the people whom thou hast chosen. [55] All this have I spoken before thee, O Lord, because thou hast said that for our sakes thou madest  this world. [56] As for the other nations, which also come of Adam, thou hast said that they are nothing, and are like unto spittle: and thou hast likened the abundance of them unto a drop that falleth from a vessel. [57] And now, O Lord, behold these nations, which are reputed as nothing, be lords over us, and devour us. [58] But we thy people, whom thou hast called thy firstborn, thy only begotten, and thy fervent lover, are given into their hands. [59] If the world now be made for our sakes, why do we not possess for an inheritance our world? How long shall this endure?

[1] And when I had made an end of speaking these words, there was sent unto me the angel which had been sent unto me the nights afore: [2] and he said unto me, Up, Esdras, and hear the words that I am come to tell thee. [3] And I said, Speak on, my Lord. Then he said unto me, There is a sea set in a wide place, that it might be * broad and vast. [4] But the entrance thereof shall be set in a narrow place so as to be like a river; [5] whoso then should desire to go into the sea to look upon it, or to rule it, if he went not through the narrow, how could he come into the broad? [6] Another thing also: There is a city builded and set in a plain country, and full of all good things; [7] but the entrance thereof is narrow, and is set in a dangerous place to fall, having a fire on the right hand, and on the left a deep water: [8] and there is one only path between them both, even between the fire and the water, so small that there could but one man go there at once. [9] If this city now be given unto a man for an inheritance, if the heir pass not the danger before him, how shall he receive his inheritance? [10] And I said, It is so, Lord. Then said he unto me, Even so also is Israel's portion. [11] Because for their sakes I made the world: and when Adam transgressed my statutes, then was decreed that now is done. [12] Then were the entrances of this world made narrow, and sorrowful and toilsome: they are but few and evil, full of perils, and charged with great toils. [13] For the entrances of the greater world are wide and sure, and bring forth fruit of immortality. [14] If then they that live enter not these strait and vain things, they can never receive those that are laid up for them. [15] Now therefore why disquietest thou thyself, seeing thou art but a corruptible man? and why art thou moved, whereas thou art but mortal? [16] and why hast thou not considered in thy mind that which is to come, rather than that which is present? [17] Then answered I and said, O Lord that bearest rule, lo, thou hast ordained in thy law, that the righteous should inherit these things, but that the ungodly should perish. [18] The righteous therefore shall suffer strait things, and hope for wide: but they that have done wickedly † have suffered the strait things, and yet shall not see the wide. [19] And he said unto me, ‡ Thou art not a judge above God, neither hast thou understanding above the Most High. [20] Yea, rather let many that now be perish, than that the law of God which is set before them be despised. [21] For God straitly commanded such as came, even as they came, what they should do to live, and what they should observe to avoid punishment. [22] Nevertheless they were not obedient unto him; but spake against him, and imagined for themselves vain things; [23] and framed cunning devices of wickedness; and said moreover of the Most High, that he is not; and knew not his ways: [24] but they despised his law, and denied his covenants; they have not been faithful to his statutes, and have not performed his works. [25] Therefore, Esdras, for the empty are empty things, and for the full are the full things. [26] For behold, the time shall come, and it shall be, when these tokens, of which I told thee before, shall come to pass, that the bride shall appear, even the city coming forth, and she shall be seen, that now is withdrawn from the earth. [27] And whosoever is delivered from the foresaid evils, the same shall see my wonders. [28] For my son Jesus shall be revealed with those that be with him, and shall rejoice them that remain four hundred years. [29] After these years shall my son Christ dieof them that, and all that have the breath of § life. [30] And the world shall be turned into the old silence seven days, like as in the first beginning: so that no man shall remain. [31] And after seven days the world, that yet awaketh not, shall be raised up, and that shall die that is corruptible. [32] And the earth shall restore those that are asleep in her, and so shall the dust those that dwell therein in silence, and the  secret places shall deliver those souls that were committed unto them. [33] And the Most High shall be revealed upon the seat of judgement,[††] and compassion shall pass away, and longsuffering shall be withdrawn: [34] but judgement only shall remain, truth shall stand, and faith shall wax strong: [35] and the work shall follow, and the reward shall be shewed, and good deeds shall awake, and wicked deeds shall not sleep. [‡‡] [36] And the [§§] pit of torment shall appear, and over against it shall be the place of rest: and the furnace of []hell shall be shewed, and over against it the paradise of delight. [37] And then shall the Most High say to the nations that are raised from the dead, See ye and understand whom ye have denied, or whom ye have not served, or whose commandments ye have despised. [38] Look on this side and on that: here is delight and rest, and there fire and torments. Thus [†††] shall he speak unto them in the day of judgement: [39] This is a day that hath neither sun, nor moon, nor stars, [40] neither cloud, nor thunder, nor lightning, neither wind, nor water, nor air, neither darkness, nor evening, nor morning, [41] neither summer, nor spring, nor heat, nor [‡‡‡] winter, neither frost, nor cold, nor hail, nor rain, nor dew, [42] neither noon, nor night, nor dawn, neither shining, nor brightness, nor light, save only the splendour of the glory of the Most High, whereby all shall see the things that are set before them: [43] for it shall endure as it were a week of years. [44] This is my judgement and the ordinance thereof; but to thee only have I shewed these things.

[45] And I answered, I said even then, O Lord, and I say now: blessed are they that be now alive and keep the statutes ordained of thee. [46] But as touching them for whom my prayer was made, what shall I say? for who is there of them that be alive that hath not sinned, and who of the sons of men that hath not transgressed thy covenant? [47] And now I see, that the world to come shall bring delight to few, but torments unto many. [48] For an evil heart hath grown up in us, which hath led us astray from these statutes, and hath brought us into corruption and into the ways of death, hath shewed us the paths of perdition and removed us far from life; and that, not a few only, but well nigh all that have been created.

[49] And he answered me, and said, Hearken unto me, and I will instruct thee; and I will admonish thee yet again: [50] for this cause the Most High hath not made one world, but two. [51] For whereas thou hast said that the just are not many, but few, and the ungodly abound, hear the answer thereunto. [52] If thou hath choice stones exceeding few, [§§§] wilt thou set for thee over against them according to their number things of lead and clay?

[53] And I said, Lord, how shall this be?

[54] And he said unto me, Not only this, but ask the earth, and she shall tell thee; intreat her, and she shall declare unto thee. [55] For thou shalt say unto her, Thou bringest forth gold and silver and brass, and iron also and lead and clay: [56] but silver is more abundant than gold, and brass than silver, and iron than brass, lead than iron, and clay than lead. [57] Judge thou therefore which things are precious and to be desired, whatso is abundant or what is rare.

[58] And I said, O Lord that bearest rule, that which is plentiful is of less worth, for that which is more rare is more precious.

[59] And he answered me, and said, [*] Weigh within thyself the things that thou hast thought, for he that hath what is hard to get rejoiceth over him that hath what is plentiful. [60] So also is the [†] judgement which I have promised: for I will rejoice over the few that shall be saved, inasmuch as these are they that have made my glory now to prevail, and of whom my name is now named. [61] And I will not grieve over the multitude of them that perish; for these are they that are now like unto vapour, and are become as flame and smoke; they are set on fire and burn hotly, and are quenched.

[62] And I answered and said, O thou earth, wherefore hast thou brought forth, if the mind is made out of dust, like as all other created things? [63] For it were better that the dust itself had been unborn, so that the mind might not have been made therefrom. [64] But now the mind groweth with us, and by reason of this we are tormented, because we perish and know it. [65] Let the race of men lament and the beasts of the field be glad; let all that are born lament, but let the fourfooted beasts and the cattle rejoice. [66] For it is far better with them than with us; for they look not for judgement, neither do they know of torments or of salvation promised unto them after death. [67] For what doth it profit us, that we shall be preserved alive, but yet be afflicted with torment? [68] For all that are born are [‡] defiled with iniquities, and are full of sins and laden with offences: [69] and if after death we were not to come into judgement, peradventure it had been better for us.

[70] And he answered me, and said, When the Most High made the world, and Adam and all them that came of him, he first prepared the Judgement and the things that pertain unto the judgement. [71] And now understand from thine own words, for thou hast said that the mind groweth with us. [72] They therefore that dwell upon the earth shall be tormented for this reason, that having understanding they have wrought iniquity, and receiving commandments have not kept them, and having obtained a law they dealt unfaithfully with that which they received. [73] What then will they have to say in the judgement, or how will they answer in the last times? [74] For how great a time hath the Most High been longsuffering with them that inhabit the world, and not for their sakes, but because of the times which he hath foreordained!

[75] And I answered and said, if I have found grace in thy sight, O Lord, shew this also unto thy servant, whether after death, even now when every one of us giveth up his soul, we shall be kept in rest until those times come, in which thou shalt renew the creation, or whether we shall be tormented forthwith.

[76] And he answered me, and said, I will shew thee this also; but join not thyself with them that are scorners, nor number thyself with them that are tormented. [77] For thou hast a treasure of good works laid up with the Most High, but it shall not be shewed thee until the last times. [78] For concerning death the teaching is: When the determinate sentence hath gone forth from the Most High that a man should die, as the spirit leaveth the body to return again to him who gave it, it adoreth the glory of the Most High first of all. [79] And if it be one of those that have been scorners and have not kept the way of the Most High, and that have despised his law, and that hate them that fear [§] God, [80] these spirits shall not enter into habitations, but shall wander and be in torments forthwith, ever grieving and sad, in seven ways. [81] The first way, because they have despised the law of the Most High. [82] The second way, because they cannot now make a good returning that they may live. [83] The third way, they shall see the reward laid up for them that have believed the covenants of the Most High. [84] The fourth way, they shall consider the torment laid up for themselves in the last days. [85] The fifth way, they shall see the dwelling places of the others guarded by angels, with great quietness. [86] The sixth way, they shall see [] how forthwith some of them shall pass into torment. [87] The seventh way, which is [††] more grievous than all the aforesaid ways, because they shall pine away in confusion and be consumed with [‡‡] shame, and shall be withered up by fears, seeing the glory of the Most High before whom they have sinned whilst living, and before whom they shall be judged in the last times. [88] Now this is the order of those who have kept the ways of the Most High, when they shall be separated from the corruptible vessel. [89] In the time [§§] that they dwelt therein they painfully served the Most High, and were in jeopardy every hour, that they might keep the law of the lawgiver perfectly. [90] Wherefore this is the teaching concerning them: [91] First of all they shall see with great joy the glory of him who taketh them up, for they shall have rest in seven orders. [92] The first order, because they have striven with great labour to overcome the evil thought which was fashioned together with them, that it might not lead them astray from life into death. [93] The second order, because they see the perplexity in which the souls of the ungodly wander, and the punishment that awaiteth them. [94] The third order, they see the witness which he that fashioned them beareth concerning them, that while they lived they kept the law which was given them in trust. [95] The fourth order, they understand the rest which, being gathered in their chambers, they now enjoy with great quietness, guarded by angels, and the glory that awaiteth them in the last days. [96] The fifth order, they rejoice, seeing how they have now escaped from that which is corruptible, and how they shall inherit that which is to come, while they see moreover the straitness and the [] painfulness from which they have been delivered, and the large room which they shall receive with joy and immortality. [97] The sixth order, when it is shewed unto them how their face shall shine as the sun, and how they shall be made like unto the light of the stars, being henceforth incorruptible. [98] The seventh order, which is greater than all the aforesaid orders, because they shall rejoice with confidence, and because they shall be bold without confusion, and shall be glad without fear, for they hasten to behold the face of him whom in their lifetime they served, and from whom they shall receive their reward in glory. [99] This is the order of the souls of the just, as from henceforth [†††] is announcer unto them, and aforesaid are the ways of torture which they that would not give heed shall suffer from henceforth. [100] And I answered and said, shall time therefore be given unto the souls after they are separated from the bodies, that they may see that whereof thou hast spoken unto me? [101] And he said, Their freedom shall be for seven days, that for seven days they may see the things whereof thou hast been told, and afterwards they shall be gathered together in their habitations. [102] And I answered and said, if I have found favour in thy sight, shew further unto me thy servant whether in the day of judgment the just will be able to intercede for the ungodly or to intreat the Most High for them, [103] whether fathers for children, or children for parents, or brethren for brethren, or kinsfolk for their next of kin, or [‡‡‡] friends for them that are most dear. [104] And he answered me, and said, Since thou hast found favor in my sight, I will shew thee this also: The day of judgement is [§§§] a day of decision, and displayeth unto all the seal of truth; even as now a father sendeth not his son, or a son his father, or a master his slave, or a [*] friend him that is most dear, that in his stead he may [†] be sick, or sleep, or eat, or be healed: [105] so never shall anyone pray for another [‡] in that day, neither shall one lay a burden on another, for then shall all bear every one his own righteousness or unrighteousness.

[106] And I answered and said, How do we now find that first Abraham prayed for the people of Sodom, and Moses for the fathers that sinned in the wilderness: [107] and Joshua after him for Israel in the days of [§] Achar: [108] and Samuel [] in the days of Saul; and David for the plague: and Solomon for them that should worship in the sanctuary: [109] and Elijah for those that received rain; and for the dead, that he might live: [110] and Hezekiah for the people in the days of Sennacherib: and many for many? [111] If therefore now, when corruption is grown up, and unrighteousness increased, the righteous have prayed for the ungodly, wherefore shall it not be so then also?

[112] He answered me, and said, This present world is not the end; the full glory abideth [††] not therein: therefore have they who were able prayed for the weak. [113] But the day of judgement shall be the end of this time, [‡‡] and the beginning of the immortality for to come, wherein corruption is passed away, [114] intemperance is at an end, infidelity is cut off, but righteousness is grown, and truth is sprung up. [115] Then shall no man be able to have mercy on him that is cast in judgement, nor to thrust down him that hath gotten the victory.

[116] I answered then and said, this is my first and last saying, that it had been better that the earth had not given thee Adam: or else, when it had given him, to have restrained him from sinning. [117] For what profit is it for all that are in this present time to live in heaviness, and after death to look for punishment? [118] O thou Adam, what hast thou done? For though it was thou that sinned, the evil is not fallen on thee alone, but upon all of us that come of thee. [119] For what profit is it unto us, if there be promised us an immortal time, whereas we have done the works that bring death? [120] And that there is promised us an everlasting hope, whereas ourselves most miserably are become vain? [121] And that there are reserved habitations of health and safety, whereas we have lived wickedly? [122] And that the glory of the Most High shall defend them which have led a pure life, whereas we have walked in the most wicked ways of all? [123] And that there shall be shewed a paradise, whose fruit endureth without decay, wherein is abundance and healing, but we shall not enter into it, [124] for we have walked in unpleasant places? [125] And that the faces of them which have used abstinence shall shine above the stars, whereas our faces shall be blacker than darkness? [126] For while we lived and committed iniquity, we considered not what we should have to suffer after death.

[127] Then he answered and said, This is the [§§] condition of the battle, which man that is born upon the earth shall fight; [128] that, if he be overcome, he shall suffer as thou hast said: but if he get the victory, he shall receive the thing that I say. [129] For this is the way whereof Moses spake unto the people while he lived, saying, Choose thee life, that thou mayest live. [130] Nevertheless they believed not him, nor yet the prophets after him, no, nor me which have spoken unto them; [131] so that there shall not be such heaviness in their destruction, as there shall be joy over them that are persuaded to salvation.

[132] I answered then and said, I know, Lord, that the Most High is now called merciful, in that he hath mercy upon them which are not yet come into the world; [133] and compassionate, in that he hath compassion upon those that turn to his law; [134] and longsuffering, for that he long suffereth those that have sinned, as his creatures; [135] and bountiful, for that he is ready to give rather than to exact; [136] and of great mercy, for that he multiplieth more and more mercies to them that are present, and that are past, and also to them which are to come; [137] (for if he multiplied not his mercies, the world would not continue with them that dwell therein;) [138] and one that forgiveth, for if he did not forgive of his goodness, that they which have committed iniquities might be eased of them, the ten thousandth part of men would not remain living; [139] and a judge, for if he did not pardon them that were created by his word, and blot out the multitude of [] offences, [140] there would peradventure be very few left in an innumerable multitude.

[1] And he answered me, and said, The Most High hath made this world for many, but the world to come for few. [2] I will tell thee now a similitude, Esdras; As when thou asketh the earth, it shall say unto thee, that it giveth very much mould whereof earthen vessels are made, and little dust that gold cometh of: even so is the course of the present world. [3] There be many created, but few shall be saved.

[4] And I answered and said, Swallow down understanding then, O my soul, and let my heart devour wisdom. [5] For thou [*] art come hither without thy will, and departest when thou wouldest not: for there is given thee no longer space than only to live a short time. [6] O Lord, that art over us, suffer thy servant, that we may pray before thee, and give us seed unto our heart, and culture to our understanding, that there may come fruit of it, whereby every one shall live that is corrupt, who beareth the [†] likeness of a man. [7] For thou art alone, and we all one workmanship of thine hands, like as thou hast said. [8] Forasmuch as thou quickenest the body that is fashioned now in the womb, and givest it members, thy creature is preserved in fire and water, and nine months doth thy workmanship endure thy creature which is created in her. [9] But that which keepeth and that which is kept shall both be kept [‡] by thy keeping: and when the womb giveth up again that which hath grown in it, [10] thou hast commanded that out of the parts of the body, that is to say, out of the breasts, be given milk, which is the fruit of the breasts, [11] that the thing which is fashioned may be nourished for a time, and afterwards thou shalt order it in thy mercy. [12] Yea, thou hast brought it up in thy righteousness, and nurtured it in thy law, and corrected it with thy judgement. [13] And thou shalt mortify it as thy creature, and quicken it as thy work. [14] If therefore thou shalt [§] lightly and suddenly destroy him which with so great labour was fashioned by thy commandment, to what purpose was he made? [15] Now therefore I will speak; touching man in general, thou knowest best; but touching thy people will I speak, for whose sake I am sorry; [16] and for thine inheritance, for whose cause I mourn; and for Israel, for whom I am heavy; and for the seed of Jacob, for whose sake I am troubled; [17] therefore will I begin to pray before thee for myself and for them: for I see the falls of us that dwell in the land; [18] but I have heard the swiftness of the judgment which is to come. [19] Therefore hear my voice, and understand my saying, and I will speak before thee.

The beginning of the words of Esdras, before he was taken up. And he said, [20] O Lord, thou that [] abidest for ever, whose eyes are exalted, and whose chambers are in the air; [21] whose throne is inestimable; whose glory may not be comprehended; before whom the hosts of angels stand with trembling, [22] [††] at whose bidding they are changed to wind and fire; whose word is sure, and sayings constant; whose ordinance is strong, and commandment fearful; [23] whose look drieth up the depths, and whose indignation maketh the mountains to melt away, and whose truth beareth witness: [24] hear, O Lord, the prayer of thy servant, and give ear to the petition of thy handiwork; [25] attend unto my words, for so long as I live I will speak, and so long as I have understanding I will answer. [26] O look not upon the sins of thy people; but on them that have served thee in truth, [27] Regard not the doings of them that deal wickedly, but of them that have kept thy covenants in affliction. [28] Think not upon those that have walked feignedly before thee; but remember them which have willingly known thy fear. [29] Let it not be thy will to destroy them which have lived like cattle; but look upon them that have [‡‡] clearly taught thy law. [30] Take thou no indignation at them which are deemed worse than beasts; but love them that have alway put their trust in thy glory. [31] For we and our fathers have [§§] passed our lives in [] ways that bring death: but thou because of us sinners [†††] art called merciful. [32] For if thou hast a desire to have mercy upon us, then shalt thou be called merciful, to us, namely, that have no works of righteousness. [33] For the just, which have many good works laid up with thee, shall for their own deeds receive reward. [34] For what is man, that thou shouldest take displeasure at him? or what is a corruptible race, that thou shouldest be so bitter toward it? [35] For in truth there is no man among them that be born, but he hath dealt wickedly; and among them [‡‡‡] that have lived there is none which have not done amiss. [36] For in this, O Lord, thy righteousness and thy goodness shall be declared, if thou be merciful unto them which have no store of good works.

[37] Then answered he me, and said, Some things hast thou spoken aright, and according unto thy words so shall it come to pass. [38] For indeed I will not think on the fashioning of them which have sinned, or their death, their judgement, or their destruction; [39] but I will rejoice over the framing of the righteous, their pilgrimage also, and the salvation, and the reward, that they shall have. [40] Like therefore as I have spoken, so shall it be. [41] For as the husbandman soweth much seed upon the ground, and planteth many trees, and yet not all that is sown shall §§§ come up in due season, neither shall all that is planted take root: even so they that are sown in the world shall not all be saved.

[42] I answered then and said, if I have found favour, let me speak before thee. [43] Forasmuch as the husbandman's seed, if it come not up, seeing that it hath not received thy rain in due season, or if it be corrupted through too much rain, * so perisheth; [44] likewise man, which is formed with thy hands, and is called thine own image, because he is made like unto thee, for whose sake thou hast formed all things, even him hast thou made like unto the husbandman's seed. [45] Be not wroth with us, but spare thy people, and have mercy upon thine inheritance; for thou hast mercy upon thine own creation.

[46] Then answered he me, and said, Things present are for them that now be, and things to come for such as shall be hereafter. [47] For thou comest far short that thou shouldest be able to love my creature more than I. But thou hast brought thyself full nigh unto the unrighteous. Let this never be. [48] Yet in this shalt thou be admirable unto the Most High; [49] in that thou hast humbled thyself, as it becometh thee, and hast not judged thyself worthy to be among the righteous, so as to be much glorified. [50] For many grievous miseries shall befall them that in the last times dwell in the world, because they have walked in great pride. [51] But understand thou for thyself, and of such as be like thee seek out the glory. [52] For unto you is paradise opened, the tree of life planted, the time to come is prepared, plenteousness is made ready, a city is builded, and rest is † allowed, goodness is perfected, wisdom being perfect aforehand. [53] The root of evil is sealed up from you, weakness is done away from you, and ‡ [death] is hidden; hell and corruption are fled into forgetfulness: [54] sorrows are passed away, and in the end is shewed the treasure of immortality. [55] Therefore ask thou no more questions concerning the multitude of them that perish. [56] For when they had received liberty, they despised the Most High, thought scorn of his law, and forsook his ways. [57] Moreover they have trodden down his righteous, [58] and said in their heart, that there is no God; yea, and that knowing they must die. [59] For as the things aforesaid shall receive you, so thirst and pain which are prepared shall receive them: for the Most High willed not that men should come to nought: [60] but they which be created have themselves defiled the name of him that made them, and were unthankful unto him which prepared life for them. [61] And therefore is my judgement now at hand, [62] which I have not shewed unto all men, but unto thee, and a few like thee.

Then answered I and said, [63] Behold, O Lord, now hast thou shewed me the multitude of the wonders, which thou wilt do in the last times: but at what time, thou hast not shewed me.

[1] And he answered me, and said, Measure thou diligently within thyself: and when thou seest that a certain part of the signs are past, which have been told thee beforehand, [2] then shalt thou understand, that it is the very time, wherein the Most High will visit the world which was made by him. [3] And when there shall be seen in the world earthquakes, disquietude of peoples, devices of nations, wavering of leaders, disquietude of princes, [4] then shalt thou understand, that the Most High spake of these things from the days that were aforetime from the beginning. [5] For like as of all that is made in the world, the beginning [*] is evident, and the end manifest; [6] so also are the times of the Most High: the beginnings are manifest in wonders and mighty works, and the end in effects and signs. [7] And everyone that shall be saved, and shall be able to escape by his wotks, or by faith, whereby he hath believed, [8] shall be preserved from the said perils, and shall see my salvation in my land, and within my borders, which I have sanctified for me from the beginning. [9] Then shall they be amazed, which now have abused my ways: and they that have cast them away despitefully shall dwell in torments. [10] For as many as in their life have received benefits, and yet have not known me; [11] and as many as have scorned my law, while they had yet liberty, and, when as yet place of repentance was open unto them, understood not, but despised [†] it; [12] the same must know [‡] it after death by torment. [13] And therefore be thou no longer curious how the ungodly shall be punished; but inquire how the righteous shall be saved, [§] they whose the world is, and for whom the world was created.

[14] And I answered and said, [15] I have said before, and now do speak, and will speak it also hereafter, that there be more of them which perish, than of the which will be saved: [16] like as a wave is greater than a drop.

[17] And he answered me, saying, Like as the field is, so also the seed; and as the flowers be, such are the colours also; and such as the work is, such also is the [] judgement thereon; and as is the husbandman, so is his threshing-floor also. For there was a time in the world, [18] even then when I was preparing for them that now live, before the world was made for them to dwell in; and then no man spake against me, [19] for [††] there was not any: but now they which are created in this world that is prepared, both [‡‡] with a table that faileth not, and a law which is unsearchable, are corrupted in their manners. [20] So I considered my world, and, lo, it was destroyed, and my earth, and, lo, it was in peril, because of the devices that were come into it. [21] And I saw, and spared them, but not greatly, and saved me a grape out of a cluster, and a plant out of [§§] a great forest. [22] Let the multitude perish then, which was born in vain; and let my grape be saved, and my plant; for with great labour have I made them perfect. [23] Nevertheless if thou wilt cease yet seven days more, (howbeit thou shalt not fast in them, [24] but shalt go into a field of flowers, where no house is builded, and eat only of the flowers of the field; and thou shalt taste no flesh, and shalt drink no wine, but shalt eat flowers only;) [25] and pray unto the Most High continually, then will I come and talk with thee.

[26] So I went my way, like as he commanded me, into the field which is called [] Ardat; and there I sat among the flowers, and did eat of the herbs of the field, and the meat of the same satisfied me. [27] And it came to pass after seven days that I lay upon the grass, and my heart was vexed again, like as before: [28] and my mouth was opened, and I began to speak before the Lord Most High, and said, [29] O Lord, thou didst shew thyself among us, unto our fathers in the wilderness, when they went forth out of Egypt, and when they came into the wilderness, where no man treadeth and that beareth no fruit; [30] and thou didst say, Hear me, thou Israel; and mark my words, O seed of Jacob. [31] For, behold, I sow my law in you, and it shall bring forth fruit in you, and ye shall be glorified in it for ever. [32] But our fathers, which received the law, kept it not, and observed not the statutes: and the fruit of the law did not perish, neither could it, for it was thine; [33] yet they that received it perished, because they kept not the thing that was sown in them. [34] And, lo, it is a custom, that when the ground hath received seed, or the sea a ship, or any vessel meat or drink, and when it cometh to pass that that which is sown, or that which is launched, [35] or the things which have been received, should come to an end, these come to an end, but the receptacles remain: yet with us it hath not happened so. [36] For we that have received the law shall perish by sin, and our heart also which received it. [37] Notwithstanding the law perisheth not, but remaineth in its honour.

[38] And when I spake these things in my heart, I looked about me with mine eyes, and upon the right side I saw a woman, and, behold, she mourned and wept with a loud voice, and was much grieved in mind, and her clothes were rent, and she had ashes upon her head. [39] Then let I my thoughts go wherein I was occupied, and turned me unto her, [40] and said unto her, Wherefore weepest thou? and why art thou grieved in thy mind?

[41] And she said unto me, Let me alone, my Lord, that I may bewail myself, and add unto my sorrow, for I am sore vexed in my mind, and brought very low.

[42] And I said unto her, What aileth thee? Tell me. [43] She said unto me, I thy servant was barren, and had no child, though I had a husband thirty years. [44] And every hour and every day these thirty years did I make my prayer to the Most High day and night. [45] And it came to pass after thirty years that God heard me thine handmaid, and looked upon my low estate, and considered my trouble, and gave me a son: and I rejoiced in him greatly, I and my husband, and all my [†††] neighbours: and we gave great honour unto the Mighty. [46] And I nourished him with great travail. [47] So when he grew up, and I came to take him a wife, I made him a feast day.

[1] And it so came to pass, that when my son was entered into his wedding chamber, he fell down, and died. [2] Then we all overthrew the lights, and all my [*] neighbours rose up to comfort me: and I remained quiet unto the second day at night. [3] And it came to pass, when they had all left off to comfort me, to the end I might be quiet, then rose I up by night, and fled, and came hither into this field, as thou seest. [4] And I do now purpose not to return into the city, but here to stay, and neither to eat nor drink, but continually to mourn and to fast until I die.

[5] Then left I the meditations wherein I was, and answered her in anger, and said, [6] Thou foolish woman above all other, seest thou not our mourning, and what hath happened unto us? [7] how that Sion the mother of us all is full of sorrow, and much humbled. [8] [†] It is right now to mourn very sore, seeing we all mourn, and to be sorrowful, seeing we are all in sorrow, but thou sorrowest for one son. [9] For ask the earth, and she shall tell thee, that it is she which ought to mourn for so many that grow upon her. [10] For out of her all had their beginnings, and others shall come; and, behold, they walk almost all into destruction, and the multitude of them is utterly rooted out. [11] Who then should make more mourning, [‡] she, that hath lost so great a multitude, or thou, which art grieved but for one? [12] but if thou sayest unto me, My lamentation is not like the earth's, for I have lost the fruit of my womb, which I brought forth with pains, and bare with sorrows: [13] but it is with the earth after the manner of the earth; the multitude present in it is gone, as it came: [14] then say I unto thee, Like as thou hast brought forth with sorrow; even so the earth also hath given her fruit, namely, man, ever since the beginning unto him that made her. [15] Now therefore keep thy sorrow to thyself, and bear with a good courage the adversities which have befallen thee. [16] For if thou shalt acknowledge the decree of God to be just, thou shalt both receive thy son in time, and shalt be praised among women. [17] Go thy way then into the city to thine husband.

[18] And she said unto me, That will I not do: I will not go into the city, but here will I die.

[19] So I proceeded to speak further unto her, and said, [20] Do not so, but suffer thyself to be prevailed on by reason of the adversities of Sion; and be comforted by reason of the sorrow of Jerusalem. [21] For thou seest that our sanctuary is laid waste, our altar broken down, our temple destroyed; [22] our psaltery is brought low, our song is put to silence, our rejoicing is at an end; the light of our candlestick is put out, the ark of our covenant is spoiled, our holy things are defiled, and the name that is called upon us is profaned; our freemen are despitefully treated, our priests are burnt, our Levites are gone into captivity, our virgins are defiled, and our wives ravished; our righteous men carried away, our little ones betrayed, our young men are brought into bondage, and our strong men are become weak; [23] and, what is more than all, the seal of Sion - for she hath now lost the seal of her honour, and is delivered into the hands of them that hate us. [24] Thou therefore shake off thy great heaviness, and put away from thee the multitude of sorrows, that the Mighty may be merciful unto thee again, and the Most High may give thee rest, even ease from thy travails.

[25] And it came to pass, while I was talking with her, behold, her face upon a sudden shined exceedingly, and her countenance glistered like lightning, so that I was sore afraid § of her, and mused what this might be; [26] and, behold, suddenly she made a great cry very fearful; so that the earth shook at the noise. [27] And I looked, and, behold, the woman appeared unto me no more, but there was a city builded, and a place shewed itself from large foundations: then was I afraid, and cried with a loud voice, and said, [28] Where is Uriel the angel, who came unto me at the first? for he hath caused me to fall into this great trance, and mine end is turned into corruption, and my prayer to rebuke. [29] And as I was speaking these words, behold, the angel who had come unto me at the first came unto me, and he looked upon me: [30] and, lo, I lay as one that had been dead, and mine understanding was taken from me; and he took me by the right hand, and comforted me, and set me upon my feet, and said unto me, [31] What aileth thee? and why art thou so disquieted? and why is thine understanding troubled, and the thoughts of thine heart? [32] And I said, Because thou hast forsaken me: yet I did according to thy words, and went into the field, and, lo, I have seen, and yet see, that which I am not able to express. [33] And he said unto me, Stand up like a man, and I will advise thee. [34] Then said I, Speak on, my Lord; only forsake me not, lest I die frustrate of my hope. [35] For I have seen that I knew not, and hear that I do not know. [36] Or is my sense deceived, or my soul in a dream? [37] Now therefore I beseech thee to shew thy servant concerning this trance.

[38] And he answered me, and said, Hear me, and I shall inform thee, and tell thee concerning the things whereof thou art afraid: For the Most High hath revealed many secret things unto thee. [39] He hath seen that thy way is right: for that thou sorrowest continually for thy people, and makest great lamentation for Sion. [40] This therefore is the meaning of the vision. [41] The woman which appeared unto thee a little while ago, whom thou sawest mourning, and begannest to comfort her: [42] but now seest thou the likeness of the woman no more, but there appeared unto thee a city in building: [43] and whereas she told thee of the death of her son, this is the solution: [44] This woman, whom thou sawest, is [] Sion, [††] whom thou now seest as a city builded; [45] and whereas she said unto thee, that she hath been thirty years barren, it is, because there were three [‡‡] thousand years in the world wherein there was no offering as yet offered in her. [46] And it came to pass after three [§§] thousand years that Solomon builded the city, and offered offerings: then it was that the barren bare a son. [47] And whereas she told thee that she nourished him with travail: that was the dwelling in Jerusalem. [48] And whereas she said unto thee, My son coming into his marriage chamber died, and that misfortune befell her: this was the destruction that came to Jerusalem. [49] And, behold, thou sawest her likeness, how she mourned for her son, and thou begannest to comfort her for what hath befallen her; [] these were the things to be opened unto thee. [50] For now the Most High, seeing that thou art grieved unfeignedly, and sufferest from thy whole heart for her, hath shewed thee the brightness of her glory, and the comeliness of her beauty: [51] and therefore I bade thee remain in the field where no house was builded: [52] for I knew that the Most High would shew this unto thee. [53] Therefore I commanded thee to come into the field, where no foundation of any building was. [54] For in the place wherein the city of the Most High was to be shewed, the work of no man's building could stand. [55] Therefore fear thou not, nor let thine heart be affrighted, but go thy way in, and see the beauty and greatness of the building, as much as thine eyes be able to see: [56] and then shalt thou hear as much as thine ears may comprehend. [57] For thou art blessed above many, and with the Most High art called by name, like as but few. [58] But to-morrow at night thou shalt remain here; [59] and so shall the Most High shew thee those visions in dreams, of what the Most High will do unto them that dwell upon earth in the last days. So I slept that night and another, like as he commanded me.

[1] And it came to pass the second night that I saw a dream, and, behold, there came up from the sea an eagle, which had twelve feathered wings, and three heads. it with them. [5] Moreover I beheld, and, lo, the eagle flew with her wings, to reign over the earth, and over them that dwell therein. [6] And I beheld how that all things under heaven were subject unto her, and no man spake against her, no, not one creature upon earth. [7] And I beheld, and, lo, the eagle rose upon her talons, and uttered her voice to her wings, saying, [8] Watch not all at once: sleep every one in his own place, and watch by course: [9] but let the heads be preserved for the last. [10] And I beheld, and, lo, the voice went not out of her heads, but from the midst of her body. [11] And I numbered † her wings that were over against the other, and, behold, there were eight of them. [12] And I beheld, and, lo, on the right side there arose one wing, and reigned over all the earth; [13] and so it was, that when it reigned, the end of it came, and it appeared not, so that the place thereof appeared no more: and the next following rose up, and reigned, and it bare rule a great time; [14] and it happened, that when it reigned, the end of it came also, so that it appeared no more, like as the first. [15] And, lo, there came a voice unto it, and said, [16] Hear thou that hast borne rule over the earth all this time: this I proclaim unto thee, before thou shalt appear no more, [17] There shall none after thee attain unto thy time, neither unto the half thereof. [18] Then arose the third, and had the rule as the others before, and it also appeared no more. [19] So went it with all the wings one after another, as that every one bare rule, and then appeared no more. [20] And I beheld, and, lo, in process of time the ‡ wings that followed were set up upon the § right side, that they might rule also; and some of them ruled, but within a while they appeared no more: [21] some also of them were set up, but ruled not. [22] After this I beheld, and, lo, the twelve wings appeared no more, nor two of the little wings: [23] and there was no more left upon the eagle's body, but the three heads that rested, and six little wings. [24] And I beheld, and, lo, two little wings divided themselves from the six, and remained under the head that was upon the right side: but four remained in their place. [25] And I beheld, and, lo, these  under wings thought to set up themselves, and to have the rule. [26] And I beheld, and, lo, there was one set up, but within a while it appeared no more. [27] A second also, and it was sooner away than the first. [28] And I beheld, and, lo, the two that remained thought also in themselves to reign: [29] and while they so thought, behold, there awaked one of the heads that were at rest, namely, it that was in the midst; for that was greater than the two other heads. [30] And I beheld how that it joined the two other heads with it. [31] And, behold, the head was turned with them that were with it, and did eat up the two †† under wings that thought to have reigned. [32] But this head held the whole earth in possession, and bare rule over those that dwell therein with much oppression; and it had the governance of the world more than all the wings that had been. [33] And after this I beheld, and, lo, the head also that was in the midst suddenly appeared no more, like as the wings. [34] But there remained the two heads, which also in like sort reigned over the earth, and over those that dwell therein. [35] And I beheld, and, lo, the head upon the right side devoured it that was upon the left side.

[36] Then I heard a voice, which said unto me, Look before thee, and consider the thing that thou seest. [37] And I beheld, and, lo, as it were a lion roused out of the wood roaring: and I heard how that he sent out a man's voice unto the eagle, and spake, saying, [38] Hear thou, I will talk with thee, and the Most High shall say unto thee, [39] Art not thou it that remainest of the four beasts, whom I made to reign in my world, that the end of my times might come through them? [40] And the fourth came, and overcame all the beasts that were past, and held the world in governance with great trembling, and the whole compass of the earth with grievous oppression; and so long time dwelt he upon the earth with deceit. [41] And thou hast judged the earth, but not with truth. [42] For thou hast afflicted the meek, thou hast hurt the peaceable, thou hast hated them that speak truth, thou hast loved liars, and destroyed the dwellings of them that brought forth fruit, and cast down the walls of such as did thee no harm. [43] Therefore is thy insolent dealing come up unto the Most High, and thy pride unto the Mighty. [44] The Most High also hath looked upon his times, and, behold, they are ended, and his ages are fulfilled. [1] And it came to pass, whiles the lion spake these words unto the eagle, I beheld, [2] and, lo, the head that remained appeared no more, and [*] the two wings which went over unto it arose and set themselves up to reign, and their kingdom was small, and full of uproar. [3] And I beheld, and, lo, they appeared no more, and the whole body of the eagle was burnt, so that the earth was in great fear: then awaked I by reason of great ecstasy of mind, and from great fear, and said unto my spirit, [4] Lo, this hast thou done unto me, in that thou searchest out the ways of the Most High. [5] Lo, I am yet weary in my mind, and very weak in my spirit; nor is there the least strength in me, for the great fear wherewith I was affrighted this night. [6] Therefore will I now beseech the Most High, that he will strengthen me unto the end. [7] And I said, O Lord that bearest rule, if I have found favour in thy sight, and if I am justified with thee above many others, and if my prayer indeed be come up before thy face; [8] strengthen me then, and shew me thy servant the interpretation and plain meaning of this fearful vision, that thou mayest perfectly comfort my soul. [9] For thou hast judged me worthy to shew me the end of time and the last times.

[10] And he said unto me, This is the interpretation of this vision which thou sawest: [11] The eagle, whom thou sawest come up from the sea, is the fourth kingdom which appeared in vision to thy brother Daniel. [12] But it was not expounded unto him, as I now expound it unto thee or have expounded it. [13] Behold, the days come, that there shall rise up a kingdom upon earth, and it shall be feared above all the kingdoms that were before it. [14] In the same shall twelve kings reign, one after another: [15] whereof the second shall begin to reign, and shall have a longer time than any of the twelve. [16] This is the interpretation of the twelve wings, which thou sawest. [17] And whereas thou heardest a voice which spake, not going out from the heads, but from the midst of the body thereof, this is the interpretation: [18] That [†] after the time of that kingdom there shall arise no small contentions, and it shall stand in peril of falling: nevertheless it shall not then fall, but shall be restored again to its first estate. [19] And whereas thou sawest the eight under wings sticking to her wings, this is the interpretation: [20] That in it there shall arise eight kings, whose times shall be but small, and their years swift. [21] And two of them shall perish, when the middle time approacheth: four shall be kept for a while until the time of the ending thereof shall approach: but two shall be kept unto the end. [22] And whereas thou sawest three heads resting, this is the interpretation: [23] In the last days thereof shall the Most High raise up three ‡ kingdoms, and renew many things therein, and they shall bear rule over the earth, [24] and over those that dwell therein, with much oppression, above all those that were before them: therefore are they called the heads of the eagle. [25] For these are they that shall accomplish her wickedness, and that shall finish her last end. [26] And whereas thou sawest that the great head appeared no more, it signifieth that one of them shall die upon his bed, and yet with pain. [27] But for the two that remained, the sword shall devour them. [28] For the sword of the one shall devour him that was with him: but he also shall fall by the sword in the last days. [29] And whereas thou sawest two under wings passing § over unto the head that is on the right side, [30] this is the interpretation: These are they, whom the Most High hath kept unto his end: this is the small kingdom and full of trouble, as thou sawest. [31] And the lion, whom thou sawest rising up out of the wood, and roaring, and speaking to the eagle, and rebuking her for her unrighteousness, and all her words which thou hast heard; [32] this is the anointed one, whom the Most High hath kept unto the end  [of days, who shall spring up out of the seed of David, and he shall come and speak] unto them and reprove them for their wickedness and unrighteousness, and shall †† heap up before them their contemptuous dealings. [33] For at the first he shall set them alive in his judgement, and when he hath reproved them, he shall destroy them. [34] For the rest of my people shall he deliver with mercy, those that have been preserved throughout my borders, and he shall make them joyful until the coming of the end, even the day of judgment, whereof I have spoken unto thee from the beginning. [35] This is the dream that thou sawest, and this is the interpretation thereof: [36] and thou only hast been meet to know the secret of the Most High. [37] Therefore write all these things that thou hast seen in a book, and put them in a secret place: [38] and thou shalt teach them to the wise of thy people, whose hearts thou knowest are able to comprehend and keep these secrets. [39] But wait thou here thyself yet seven days more, that there may be shewed unto thee whatsoever it pleaseth the Most High to shew thee. And he departed from me.

[40] And it came to pass, when all the people ‡‡ saw that the seven days were past, and I had not come again into the city, they gathered them all together, from the least unto the greatest, and came unto me, and spake to me, saying, [41] What have we offended thee? and what evil have we done against thee, that thou hast utterly forsaken us, and sittest in this place? [42] For of all the prophets thou only art left us, as a cluster of the vintage, and as a lamp in a dark place, and as a haven for a ship saved from the tempest. [43] Are not the evils which are come to us sufficient? [44] If thou shalt forsake us, how much better had it been for us, if we also had been consumed in the burning of Sion! [45] For we are not better than they that died there. And they wept with

And I answered them, and said, [46] Be of good comfort, O Israel; and be not sorrowful, thou house of Jacob: [47] for the Most High hath you in remembrance, and the Mighty hath not forgotten you §§ for ever. [48] As for me, I have not forsaken you, neither am I departed from you: but am come into this place, to pray for the desolation of Sion, and that I might seek mercy for the low estate of your sanctuary. [49] And now go your way every man to his own house, and after these days will I come unto you. [50] So the people went their way into the city, like as I said unto them: [51] but I sat in the field seven days, as the angel commanded me; and in those days I did eat only of the flowers of the field, and had my meat of the herbs.

[1] And it came to pass after seven days, I dreamed a dream by night: [2] and, lo, there arose a wind from the sea, that it moved all the waves thereof. [3] And I beheld, and, lo, * [this wind caused to come up from the midst of the sea as it were the likeness of a man, and I beheld, and, lo,] that man † flew with the clouds of heaven: and when he turned his countenance to look, all things trembled that were seen under him. [4] And whensoever the voice went out of his mouth, all they burned that heard his voice, like as the ‡ wax melteth when it feeleth the fire. [5] And after this I beheld, and, lo, there was gathered together a multitude of men, out of number, from the four winds of heaven, to make war against the man that came out of the sea. [6] And I beheld, and, lo, he graved himself a great mountain, and flew upon it. [7] But I sought to see the region or place whereout the mountain was graven, and I could not. [8] And after this I beheld, and, lo, all they which were gathered together to fight against him were sore afraid, and yet durst fight. [9] And, lo, as he saw the assualt of the multitude that came, he neither lifted up his hand, nor held spear, nor any instrument of war: [10] but only I saw how that he sent out of his mouth as it had been a flood of fire, and out of his lips a flaming breath, and out of his tongue he cast forth sparks § of the storm. [11] And these were all mingled together; the flood of fire, the flaming breath, and the great storm; and fell upon the assault of the multitude which was prepared to fight, and burned them up every one, so that upon a sudden of an innumerable multitude nothing was to be perceived, but only dust of ashes and smell of smoke: when I saw this I was amazed. [12] Afterward I beheld the same man come down from the mountain, and call unto him another multitude which was peaceable. [13] And there came  much people unto him, whereof some were glad, some were sorry, some of them were bound, and other some brought of them that were offered: then through great fear I awaked, and prayed unto the Most High, and said, [14] Thou hast shewed thy servant these wonders from the beginning, and hast counted me worthy that thou shouldest receive my prayer: [15] and now shew me moreover the interpretation of this dream. [16] For as I conceive in mine understanding, woe unto them that shall be left in those days! and much more woe unto them that are not left! [17] for they that were not left shall be in heaviness, [18] understanding the things that are laid up in the latter days, but not attaining unto them. [19] But woe unto them also that are left, for this cause; for they shall see great perils and many necessities, like as these dreams declare. [20] Yet is it [††] better for one to be in peril and to come into [‡‡] these things, than to pass away as a cloud out of the world, and not to see the things that [§§] shall happen in the last days.

And he answered unto me, and said, [21] The interpretation of the vision shall I tell thee, and I will also open unto thee the things whereof thou hast made mention. [22] Whereas thou hast spoken of them that are left behind, this is the interpretation: [23] He that shall [] endure the peril in that time shall keep them that be fallen into danger, even such as have works, and faith toward the Almighty. [24] Know therefore, that they which be left behind are more blessed than they that be dead. [25] These are the interpretations of the vision: Whereas thou sawest a man coming up from the midst of the sea, [26] the same is he whom the Most High hath kept a great season, which by his own self shall deliver his creature: and he shall order them that are left behind. [27] And whereas thou sawest, that out of his mouth there came wind, and fire, and storm; [28] and whereas he held neither spear, nor any instrument of war, but destroyed the assault of that multitude which came to fight against him; this is the interpretation: [29] Behold, the days come, when the Most High will begin to deliver them that are upon the earth. [30] And there shall come astonishment of mind upon them that dwell on the earth. [31] And one shall think to war against another, city against city, place against place, people against people, and kingdom against kingdom. [32] And it shall be, when these things shall come to pass, and the signs shall happen which I shewed thee before, then shall my Son be revealed, whom thou sawest as a man ascending. [33] And it shall be, when all the nations hear his voice, every man shall leave his own land and the battle they have one against another. [34] And an innumerable multitude shall be gathered together, as thou sawest, desiring to come, and to fight against him. [35] But he shall stand upon the top of the mount Sion. [36] And Sion shall come, and shall be shewed to all men, being prepared and builded, like as thou sawest the mountain graven without hands. [37] And this my Son shall rebuke the nations which are come for their wickedness, with plagues that are like unto a tempest; [38] and shall taunt them to their face with their evil thoughts, and the torments wherewith they shall be tormented, which are likened unto a flame: and he shall destroy them without labour by the law, which is likened unto fire. [39] And whereas thou sawest that he gathered unto him another multitude that was peaceable; [40] these are the ten tribes, which were led away out of their own land in the time of Osea the king, whom Salmananser the king of the Assyrians led away captive, and he carried them beyond the River, and they were carried into another land. [41] But they took this counsel among themselves, that they would leave the multitude of the heathen, and go forth into a further country, where never mankind dwelt, [42] that they might there keep their statutes, which they had not kept in their own land. [43] And they entered by the narrow passages of the river Euphrates. [44] For the Most High then wrought signs for them, and stayed the springs of the River, till they were passed over. [45] For through that country there was a great way to go, namely, of a year and a half: and the same region is called [†††] Arzareth. [46] Then dwelt they there until the latter time; and now when they begin to come again, [47] the Most High stayeth the springs of the River again, that they may go through: therefore sawest thou the multitude gathered together with peace. [48] But those that be left behind of thy people are they that are found within my holy border. [49] It shall be therefore when he shall destroy the multitude of the nations that are gathered together, he shall defend the people that remain. [50] And then shall he shew them very many wonders.

[51] Then said I, O Lord that bearest rule, shew me this: wherefore I have seen the man coming up from the midst of the sea. [52] And he said unto me, like as one can neither seek out nor know what is in the deep of the sea, even so can no man upon earth see my Son, or those that be with him, but in the time of ‡‡‡ his day. [53] This is the interpretation of the dream which thou sawest, and for this thou only art enlightened herein. [54] For thou hast forsaken thine own ways, and applied thy diligence unto mine, and hast sought out my law. [55] Thy life hast thou ordered in wisdom, and hast called understanding thy mother. [56] And therefore have I shewed thee this; for there is a reward laid up with the Most High: and it shall be, after other three days I will speak other things unto thee, and declare unto thee mighty and wondrous things. [57] Then went I forth and passed into the field, giving praise and thanks greatly unto the Most High because of his wonders, which he did from time to time; [58] and because he governeth the time, and such things as fall in their seasons. And there I sat three days.

[1] And it came to pass upon the third day, I sat under an oak, and, behold, there came a voice out of a bush over against me, and said, Esdras, Esdras. [2] And I said, Here am I, Lord. And I stood up upon my feet. [3] Then said he unto me, In the bush I did manifestly reveal myself, and talked with Moses, when my people were in bondage in Egypt: [4] and I sent him, and * he led my people out of Egypt; and I brought him up to the mount of Sinai, where I held him by me for many days; [5] and told him many wondrous things, and shewed him the secrets of the times, and the end of the seasons; and commanded him, saying, [6] These words shalt thou publish openly, and these shalt thou hide. [7] And now I say unto thee, [8] Lay up in thy heart the signs that I have shewed, and the dreams that thou hast seen, and the interpretations which thou hast heard: [9] for thou shalt be taken away from men, and from henceforth thou shalt remain with my Son, and with such as be like thee, until the times be ended. [10] For the world hath lost its youth, and the times begin to wax old. [11] † For the world is divided into twelve parts, and ten parts of it are gone already, ‡ even the half of the tenth part: [12] and there remain of it two parts after the middle of the tenth part. [13] Now therefore set thine house in order, and reprove thy people, comfort the lowly among them, § and instruct such of them as be wise, and now renounce the life that is corruptible, [14] and let go from the mortal thoughts, cast away from thee the burdens of man, put off now thy weak nature, [15] and lay aside the thoughts that are most grievous unto thee, and haste thee to remove from these times. [16] For yet worse evils than those which thou hast seen happen shall be done hereafter. [17] For look, how much the world shall be weaker through age, so much the more shall evils increase upon them that dwell therein. [18] For the truth shall withdraw

[19] Then answered I and said, [††] I will speak before thee, O Lord. [20] Behold, I will go, as thou hast commanded me, and reprove the people that now be: but they that shall be born afterward, who shall admonish them? for the world is set in darkness, and they that dwell therein are without light. [21] For thy law is burnt, therefore no man knoweth the things that are done of thee, or the works that shall be done. [22] But if I have found favour before thee, send the Holy Spirit unto me, and I shall write all that hath been done in the world since the beginning, even the things that were written in thy law, that men may be able to find the path, and that they which would live in the latter days may live. [23] And he answered me and said, Go thy way, gather the people together, and say unto them, that they seek thee not for forty days. [24] But look thou prepare thee many tablets, and take with thee Sarea, Dabria, Selemia, Ethanus, and Asiel, these five, which are ready to write swiftly; [25] and come hither, and I shall light a lamp of understanding in thine heart, which shall not be put out, till the things be ended which thou shalt write. [26] And when thou hast done, some things shalt thou publish openly, and some things shalt thou deliver in secret to the wise: tomorrow this hour shalt thou begin to write.

[27] Then went I forth, as he commanded me, and gathered all the people together, and said, [28] Hear these words, O Israel. [29] Our fathers at the beginning were strangers in Egypt, and they were delivered from thence, [30] and received the law of life, which they kept not, which ye also have transgressed after them. [31] Then was [‡‡] the land, even the land of Sion, given you for a possession: but ye yourselves, and your fathers, have done unrighteousness, and have not kept the ways which the Most High commanded you. [32] And forasmuch as he is a righteous judge, he took from you for a while the thing that he had given you. [33] And now ye are here, and your brethren are among you. [34] Therefore if so be that ye will rule over your own understanding, and instruct your hearts, ye shall be kept alive, and after death ye shall obtain mercy. [35] For after death shall the judgement come, when we shall live again: and then shall the names of the righteous be manifest, and the works of the ungodly shall be declared. [36] Let no man therefore come unto me now, nor seek after me these forty days. [37] So I took the five men, as he commanded me, and we went forth into the field, and remained there. [38] And it came to pass on the morrow that, lo, a voice called me, saying, Esdras, open thy mouth, and drink that I give thee to drink. [39] Then opened I my mouth, and, behold, there was reached unto me a full cup, which was full as it were with water, but the colour of it was like fire. [40] And I took it, and drank: and when I had drunk of it, my heart uttered understanding, and wisdom grew in my breast, for my spirit retained its memory: [41] and my mouth was opened, and shut no more. [42] The Most High gave understanding unto the five men, and they wrote by course the things that were told them, in [§§] characters which they knew not, and they sat forty days: now they wrote in the day-time, and at night they ate bread. [43] As for me, I spake in the day, and by night I held not my tongue. [44] So in forty days were written [] fourscore and fourteen books. [45] And it came to pass, when the forty days were fulfilled, that the Most High spake unto me, saying, The first that thou hast written publish openly, and let the worthy and unworthy read it: [46] but keep the seventy last, that thou mayest deliver them to such as be wise among thy people: [47] for in them is the spring of understanding, the fountain of wisdom, and the stream of knowledge. [1] Behold, speak thou in the ears of my people the words of prophecy, which I will put in thy mouth, saith the Lord: [2] and cause thou them to be written in paper: for they are faithful and true. [3] Fear not their imaginations against thee, let not the unbelief of them that speak against thee trouble thee. [4] For all the unbelievers shall die in their unbelief.

[5] Behold, saith the Lord, I bring evils upon the whole earth; sword and famine, and death and destruction. [6] For wickedness hath prevailed over every land, and their hurtful works are come to the full. [7] Therefore saith the Lord, [8] I will hold my peace no more as touching their wickedness, which they profanely commit, neither will I suffer them in these things, which they wickedly practise: behold, the innocent and righteous blood crieth unto me, and the souls of the righteous cry out continually. [9] I will surely avenge them, saith the Lord, and will receive unto me all the innocent blood from among them. [10] Behold, my people is led as a flock to the slaughter: I will not suffer them now to dwell in the land of Egypt: [11] but I will bring them out with a mighty hand and with a high arm, and will smite Egypt with plagues, as aforetime, and will destroy all the land thereof. [12] Let Egypt mourn, and the foundations thereof, for the plague of the chastisement and the punishment that God shall bring upon it. [13] Let the husbandmen that till the ground mourn: for their seeds shall fail and their trees shall be laid waste through the blasting and hail, and a terrible star. [14] Woe to the world and them that dwell therein! [15] for the sword and their destruction draweth nigh, and nation shall rise up against nation to battle with weapons in their hands. [16] For there shall be sedition among men; and waxing strong one against another, they shall not regard their king nor the chief of their great ones, in their might. [17] For a man shall desire to go into a city, and shall not be able. [18] For because of their pride the cities shall be troubled, the houses shall be destroyed, and men shall be afraid. [19] A man shall have no pity upon his neighbor, but shall make an assault on their houses with the sword, and spoil their goods, because of the lack of bread, and for great tribulation.

[20] Behold, saith God, I call together all the kings of the earth, to stir up them that are from the rising of the sun, from the south, from the east, and Libanus; to turn themselves one against another, and repay the things that they have done to them. [21] Like as they do yet this day unto my chosen, so will I do also, and recompense in their bosom. Thus saith the Lord God: [22] My right hand shall not spare the sinners, and my sword shall not cease over them that shed innocent blood upon the earth. [23] And a fire is gone forth from his wrath, and hath consumed the foundations of the earth, and the sinners, like the straw that is kindled. [24] Woe to them that sin, and keep not my commandments! saith the Lord. [25] I will not spare them: go your way, ye rebellious children, defile not my sanctuary. [26] For the Lord knoweth all them that trespass against him, therefore hath he delivered them unto death and destruction. [27] For now are the evils come upon the whole earth, and ye shall remain in them: for God shall not deliver you, because ye have sinned against him.

[28] Behold, a vision horrible, and the appearance thereof from the east! [29] And the nations of the dragons of Arabia shall come out with many chariots, and from the day that they set forth the hissing of them is carried over the earth, so that all they which shall hear them may fear also and tremble. [30] Also the Carmonians raging in wrath shall go forth as the wild boars of the wood, and with great power shall they come, and join battle with them, and shall waste a portion of the land of the Assyrians with their teeth. [31] And then shall the dragons have the upper hand, remembering their * nature; and if they shall turn themselves, conspiring together in great power to persecute them, [32] then these shall be troubled, and keep silence through their power, and shall turn and flee. [33] And from the land of the Assyrians shall the lier in wait besiege them, and consume one of them, and upon their host shall be fear and trembling, and sedition against their kings. [34] Behold, clouds from the east and from the north unto the south, and they are very horrible to look upon, full of wrath and storm. [35] They shall dash one against another, and they shall pour out a plentiful † storm upon the earth, even their own star; and there shall be blood from the sword unto the horse's belly, [36] and to the thigh of man, and to the camel's hough. [37] And there shall be fearfulness and great trembling upon earth: and they that see that wrath shall be afraid, and trembling shall take hold upon them. [38] And after this shall there be stirred up great storms from the south, and from the north, and another part from the west. [39] And strong winds shall arise from the east, and shall shut it up, even the cloud which he raised up in wrath; and the star that was to cause destruction by the east wind shall be violently driven toward the south and west. [40] And great clouds and mighty and full of wrath shall be lifted up, and the star, that they may destroy all the earth, and them that dwell therein; and they shall pour out over every high and eminent one a terrible star, [41] fire, and hail, and flying swords, and many waters, that all plains may be full, and all rivers, with the abundance of those waters. [42] And they shall break down the cities and walls, mountains and hills, trees of the wood, and grass of the meadows, and their corn. [43] And they shall go on stedfastly unto Babylon, and destroy her. [44] They shall come unto her, and compass her about; the star and all wrath shall they pour out upon her: then shall the dust and smoke go up unto the heaven, and all they that be about her shall bewail her. [45] And they that remain shall do service unto them that have put her in fear.

[46] And thou, Asia, that art partaker in the beauty of Babylon, and in the glory of her person: [47] woe unto thee, thou wretch, because thou hast made thyself like unto her; thou hast decked thy daughters in whoredom, that they might please and glory in thy lovers, which have alway desired thee to commit whoredom withal! [48] Thou hast followed her that is hateful in all her works and inventions: therefore saith God, [49] I will send evils upon thee; widowhood, poverty, famine, sword, and pestilence, to waste thy houses unto destruction and death. [50] And the glory of thy power shall be dried up as a flower, when the heat shall arise that is sent over thee. [51] Thou shalt be weakened as a poor woman with stripes, and as one chastened with wounds, so that thy mighty ones and thy lovers thou shalt not be able to receive. [56] Like as thou shalt do unto my chosen, saith the Lord, even so shall God do unto thee, and shall deliver thee into mischief. [57] And thy children shall die of hunger, and thou shalt fall by the sword: and thy cities shall be broken down, and all thine shall perish by the sword in the field. [58] And they that be in the mountains shall die of hunger, and eat their own flesh, and drink their own blood, for very hunger of bread, and thirst of water. [59] Thou unhappy above all shalt come and shalt again receive evils. [1] Woe unto thee, Babylon, and Asia! woe unto thee, Egypt, and Syria! [2] Gird up yourselves with sackcloth and garments of hair, and bewail your children, and lament; for your destruction is at hand. [3] A sword is sent upon you, and who is he that may turn it back? [4] A fire is sent upon you, and who is he that may quench it? [5] Evils are sent upon you, and who is he that may drive them away? [6] May one drive away a hungry lion in the wood? or may one quench the fire in stubble, when it hath once begun to burn? [7] May one turn again the arrow that is shot of a strong archer? [8] The Lord God sendeth the evils, and who shall drive them away? [9] A fire shall go forth from his wrath, and who is he that may quench it? [10] He shall cast lightning, and who shall not fear? he shall thunder, and who shall not tremble? [11] The Lord shall threaten, and who shall not be utterly broken in pieces at his presence? [12] The earth quaketh, and the foundations thereof; the sea ariseth up with waves from the deep, and the waves of it shall be troubled, and the fishes thereof also, at the presence of the Lord, and before the glory of his power: [13] for strong is his right hand that bendeth the bow, his arrows that he shooteth are sharp, and shall not miss, when they begin to be shot into the ends of the world. [14] Behold, the evils are sent forth, and shall not return again, until they come upon the earth. [15] The fire is kindled, and shall not be put out, till it consume the foundations of the earth. [16] Like as an arrow which is shot of a mighty archer returneth not backward, even so the evils that are sent forth upon earth shall not return again. [17] Woe is me! woe is me! who will deliver me in those days?

[18] The beginning of sorrows, and there shall be great mournings; the beginning of famine, and many shall perish; the beginning of wars, and the powers shall stand in fear; the beginning of evils, and all shall tremble! what shall they do in all this when the evils shall come? [19] Behold, famine and plague, tribulation and anguish! they are sent as scourges for amendment. [20] But for all these things they shall not turn them from their wickedness, nor be alway mindful of the scourges. [21] Behold, victuals shall be so good cheap upon earth, that they shall think themselves to be in good case, and even then shall evils grow upon earth, sword, famine, and great confusion. [22] For many of them that dwell upon earth shall perish of famine; and the other, that escape the famine, shall the sword destroy. [23] And the dead shall be cast out as dung, and there shall be no man to comfort them: for the earth shall be left desolate, and the cities thereof shall be cast down. [24] There shall be no husbandman left to till the earth, and to sow it. [25] The trees shall give fruit, and who shall gather them? [26] The grapes shall ripen, and who shall tread them? for in all places there shall be a great forsaking: [27] for one man shall desire to see another, or to hear his voice. [28] For of a city there shall be ten left, and two of the field, which have hidden themselves in the thick groves, and in the clefts of the rocks. [29] As in an orchard of olives upon every tree there be left three or four olives, [30] or as when a vineyard is gathered there be some clusters left by them that diligently seek through the vineyard; [31] even so in those days there shall be three or four left by them that search their houses with the sword. [32] And the earth shall be left desolate, and the fields thereof shall be for briers, and her ways and all her paths shall bring forth thorns, because no sheep shall pass therethrough. [33] The virgins shall mourn, having no bridegrooms; the women shall mourn, having no husbands; their daughters shall mourn, having no helpers. [34] In the wars shall their bridegrooms be destroyed, and their husbands shall perish of famine.

[35] Hear now these things, and understand them, ye servants of the Lord. [36] Behold, the word of the Lord, receive it: disbelieve not the things whereof the Lord speaketh. [37] Behold, the evils draw nigh, and are not slack. [38] Like as a woman with child in the ninth month, when the hour of her delivery draweth near, within two or three hours doleful pains compass her womb, and when the child cometh forth from the womb, there shall be no tarrying for a moment: [39] even so shall not the evils be slack to come upon the earth, and the world shall groan, and sorrows shall take hold of it on every side. [40] O my people, hear my word: make you ready to the battle, and in those evils be even as pilgrims upon the earth. [41] He that selleth, let him be as he that fleeth away: and he that buyeth, as one that will lose: [42] he that occupieth merchandise, as he that hath no profit by it: and he that buildeth, as he that shall not dwell therein: [43] he that soweth, as if he should not reap: so also he that pruneth the vines, as he that shall not gather the grapes: [44] they that marry, as they that shall get no children; and they that marry not, as the widowed. [45] Inasmuch as they that labour labour in vain; [46] for strangers shall reap their fruits, and spoil their goods, overthrow their houses, and take their children captive, for in captivity and famine shall they beget their children: [47] and they that traffick traffick to become a spoil: the more they deck their cities, their houses, their possessions, and their own persons, [48] the more will I hate them for their sins, saith the Lord. [49] Like as a right honest and virtuous woman hateth a harlot, [50] so shall righteousness hate iniquity, when she decketh herself, and shall accuse her to her face, when he cometh that shall defend him that diligently searcheth out every sin upon earth.

[51] Therefore be ye not like thereunto, nor to the works thereof. [52] For yet a little while, and iniquity shall be taken away out of the earth, and righteousness shall reign over us. [53] Let not the sinner say that he hath not sinned: for he shall burn coals of fire upon his head, which saith, I have not sinned before God and his glory. [54] Behold, the Lord knoweth all the works of men, their imaginations, their thoughts, and their hearts. [55] Who said, Let the earth be made; and it was made: Let the heaven be made; and it was made. [56] And at his word were the stars established, and he knoweth the number of the stars. [57] Who searcheth the deep, and the treasures thereof; he hath measured the sea, and what it containeth. [58] Who hath shut the sea in the midst of the waters, and with his word hath he hanged the earth upon the waters. [59] Who spreadeth out the heaven like a vault; upon the waters hath he founded it. [60] Who hath made in the desert springs of water, and pools upon the tops of the mountains, to send forth rivers from the height to water the earth. [61] Who framed man, and put a heart in the midst of the body, and gave him breath, life, and understanding, [62] yea, the spirit of God Almighty. He who made all things, and searcheth out hidden things in hidden places, [63] surely he knoweth your imagination, and what ye think in your hearts. Woe to them that sin, and would fain hide their sin! [64] Forasmuch as the Lord will exactly search out all your works, and he will put you all to shame. [65] And when your sins are brought forth before men, ye shall be ashamed, and your own iniquities shall stand as your accusers in that day. [66] What will ye do? or how will ye hide your sins before God and his angels? [67] Behold, God is the judge, fear him: leave off from your sins, and forget your iniquities, to meddle no more with them for ever: so shall God lead you forth, and deliver you from all tribulation.

[68] For, behold, the burning wrath of a great multitude is kindled over you, and they shall take away certain of you, and feed you with that which is slain unto idols. [69] And they that consent unto them shall be had in derision and in reproach, and be trodden under foot of them. [70] For there shall be * in divers places, and in the next cities, a great insurrection upon those that fear the Lord. [71] They shall be like mad men, sparing none, but spoiling and destroying them that still fear the Lord. [72] For they shall waste and take away their goods, and cast them out of their houses. [73] Then shall be manifest the trial of mine elect; even as the gold that is tried in the fire. [74] Hear, O ye mine elect, saith the Lord: behold, the days of tribulation are at hand, and I will deliver you from them. [75] Be ye not afraid, neither doubt; for God is your guide: [76] and ye who keep my commandments and precepts, saith the Lord God, let not your sins weigh you down, and let not your iniquities lift up themselves. [77] Woe unto them that are fast bound with their sins, and covered with their iniquities, like as a field is fast bound with bushes, and the path thereof covered with thorns, that no man may travel through! [78] † It is even shut off, and given up to be consumed of fire.
